Guffey Offers New Measure To Rule Coal Price, Market

House Committee To Act Next Week

Wheeler Doubts Vote Can Be Obtained This Session.

By Felix Bruner.

Union coal miners and a large group of mine owners started a drive yesterday for enactment at this session of Congress of a bill to take the place of the Guffey coal act, outlawed by the Supreme Court last Monday.

The new bill, introduced by Senator Guffey (Democrat), Pennsylvania, and Representative Vinson (Democrat), Kentucky, carries virtually the same price-fixing and marketing provisions as the old law, but it includes none of the labor provisions, which the Supreme Court held violated the rights of the States.

In spite of the insistence of those directly interested, however, some leaders in Congress expressed doubt whether such a measure could be passed before adjournment, tentatively set for June 6.

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, chairman of the Interstate Commerce Committee, to which the Senate bill was referred, said he did not see how the measure could possibly be passed before adjournment. Representative Doughton (Democrat), North Carolina, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, said his group would meet early next week to expedite the measure. He said he did not believe hearings would be necessary.

Concedes Difficulty.

Meanwhile, Secretary Perkins expressed the hope that it still would be possible to enact some labor provisions affecting miners, but agreed that it would be "exceedingly difficult" in view of the court decision. She discussed the possibility with Guffey.

The new bill departs from the provisions of the old measure in that it sets up a commission of seven, instead of five, making the commission a part of the Interior Department. It provides also for a consumers' counsel, who would represent consumers before the commission. The commissioners and counsel would be appointed by the President and each would receive $10,000 a year.

The bill divides the country into 23 districts, with a code authority in each, and with each authority empowered to fix minimum prices within its district. The central commission would have general supervision and would have the power in certain instances to fix maximum as well as minimum prices. Miners would be represented on the code authorities.

Also included in the bill is the controverted provision for a tax of 15 per cent on all coal at the mines, 90 per cent of the tax to be refunded to mine owners complying with code provisions. The Supreme Court held that the tax was not a revenue measure but a penalty. In some quarters the decision was interpreted as outlawing the tax, but Government attorneys said they did not so construe the ruling, at the same time admitting it was a penalty.

The only reference to labor in the bill is a section asserting that it is "the public policy of the United States" that employes shall have the right of collective bargaining through representatives of their own choosing and that they shall be free from coercion and interference.

Guffey pointed out that four members of the court had held that

Trucks Fired On As Drivers Call Baltimore Strike

Baltimore, Md., May 20 (AP).—A general strike of Baltimore freight truck drivers was called tonight and police immediately reported shootings and stonings in several parts of the State.

Harry Cohen, business agent of Local 355, of the Truck Drivers, Chauffeurs, Delivery Men and Helpers Union, said strikers were ordered out with instructions to "solicit peacefully passing truck drivers to join the union."

First reports of effects of the order said that inter-city transportation over the highways was virtually at a standstill.

Strikers, organized at a hasty meeting, sent flying squads of pickets to patrol the important boulevards out of the city.

Charles Weidenheimer, of Violetville, driver of a Washington-Baltimore truck, exhibited a shattered windshield. He told police a striker had fired at him, but that he did not stop.

Near Halethorpe, on the Washington-Baltimore boulevard, another driver reported he had been fired upon. At Elkridge, and points along the Philadelphia road, drivers reported stones were hurled at them.

Many truck owners in the city ordered operations halted and some sent out messengers to order drivers en route to Washington and Philadelphia to return to their garages.

The trouble, apparently brewing for about a week, came to a head when about 400 or 500 members of the union voted the general strike at tonight's special meeting.

What Swapping Brought to Zoo

Single-Humped Camels, Real Cuckoo, Zebras and Two-Toed Sloths Present at 'Coming Out' Party With Dr. Mann as Host.

An European cuckoo, which really goes "cuckoo" as does the bird in the clock; a narrow-striped zebra such as Washington hasn't had since President Theodore Roosevelt presented one to the Zoo in 1904; a green cissa bird with two black eyes—these are a few of the creatures which were given a "coming out" party in National Zoological Park yesterday.

Director William M. Mann was host. The guests were reporters and a company of photographers.

The party was a spontaneous affair. But all suspected that Dr. Mann would not allow the circus to leave town with every animal they brought here. He seldom, if ever, does.

So the director, abetted by Head Keeper William H. Blackburne, proudly described the sterling qualities of three single humped dromedaries, the two Chapman zebras, the grevy zebra and three two-toed sloths, all of which were formerly members of the circus menagerie. The latter are not to be confused with the "ai" of crossword puzzle fame which are three-toed.

Also presented for the first time were a dozen exotic birds, a pair of wanderoo monkeys and a long-eared fox, or fennec. These were bought from a New York dealer and were uncrated yesterday.

Getting the three zebras out to the Zoo from the circus grounds was a delicate matter. Still babies, they naturally did not wish to leave their parents. Nor did the mother and father zebras relish the idea of their offspring being sold and traded down Rock Creek.

It was necessary to allow the grevy's mother and father and the mothers of the Chapman zebras to

Townsend Sees 200 Supporters In Next House

OARP Leader Tells Inquiry Clubs Will Elect 150 From All Districts.

At least 200 House members in the next Congress will be pledged to his old-age pension plan, Dr. Francis E. Townsend, the founder and leader of the OARP, predicted before the Bell committee investigating his activities late yesterday.

Speaking in a voice that was low and sometimes jerky, the witness, whose plan is aimed to give a monthly income of $200 a month to all persons 60 years of age and over, said that there would be at least one Townsend candidate in each Congressional district, and in some cases two.

"We'll gain about 150 new Congressmen," asserted Dr. Townsend, "in addition to the 50 or 60 we now claim."

To newspapermen, the 69-year-old physician stated that his movement would sweep the country politically "west of the Mississippi."

Dr. Townsend became irritated yesterday afternoon at sharp and repeated questioning regarding his knowledge of his plan, which now has millions of followers, according to his claims.

Refuses Answer.

"Oh, what's the use of all this nonsense!" he snapped back at the committee members as they bombarded him relentlessly.

"Well, doctor, as a matter of fact, you don't know much about the Townsend movement except the collection of money, do you?" asked Representative Clare E. Hoffman (Republican), of Michigan.

Plane Experts First to View Wind Tunnel

Research Engineers Also See Test of Wind Forces on Dirigibles.

By Samuel Lubell.

A Staff Correspondent.

Langley Field, Va., May 20.—The world's largest high-speed wind tunnel for testing aircraft models—a tunnel that generates a 500-mile wind that would pick up a cinder and whirl it away with the speed of a bullet—was demonstrated here for the first time today at the eleventh aircraft engineering research conference sponsored by the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics.

In another demonstration, charts revealing the dangerous sweep of wind forces near the ground in the landing of a dirigible were shown as tested with a 20-foot model of the Akron. Where the nose of the airship was pointed into a 20-mile wind, the charts showed, a lifting strain of as much as 25,000 pounds and a lateral pull of 65,000 pounds resulted.

The first time that the wind forces prevalent in dirigible landings ever has been measured, the data shown may aid in eliminating landing and mooring hazards and provide the basis for a new and happier adventure by the United States in the field of lighter-than-air craft.

Methods of increasing speeds, as in previous years, were stressed. Sketches of vari-shaped wings, designed to attain the maximum lift and the minimum drag, were shown, as were sketches of broader dimensioned propellors, especially fashioned for high speed airplanes.

Outstanding of the many new wing developments was a new fillet, or juncture between the wing and fuselage, that makes for higher lifts with consequent material gains in speed and efficiency. Plans for constructing this wing fillet were

Scissors Point 'Shot' Into Ankle Of Rockville Girl Puzzles Police

Montgomery County police were mystified last night by the "shooting" of 15-year-old Mary Marino, of Rockville.

About 5 p. m., Mary, who is a student at St. Martin's School in Gaithersburg, was walking home from the Rockville railroad station, where her school bus had left her.

She lives only a few blocks from the station at the home of Mrs. George Norris.

Suddenly she felt a sting in her ankle. She looked around and didn't see any bees or snakes, and kept on walking.

When she reached home, however, Mary's ankle was giving her much pain. Sergt. Roy Bodmer, of the Montgomery County police took her to the office of Dr. W. S. Murphy, of Rockville.

Dr. Murphy first thought the wound looked like a bullet hole. Probing further, he found the broken point of a pair of shears an inch and a half long and almost a half-inch wide at the broad end. It was so deeply imbedded, he said, that it would have been fatal had it struck a more vital part.

The girl told police there were no automobiles near at the time. They searched the scene and found nothing suspicious except some bushes where an assailant might have hidden.

They were unable to explain what weapon could have been used, as the missle was too large for an air rifle.

Mrs. Lyddane Tryst Is Told By Witness

Clerk Discloses Night Meeting With Beall in Cemetery.

By Edward T. Folliard.

A Staff Correspondent.

Hagerstown, Md., May 20.—A surprise witness took the stand today in the Lyddane murder conspiracy trial and told of seeing Anne Lyddane and Arthur Beall keeping a tryst amid the tombstones of a Maryland cemetery.

The witness was J. C. Varah, of Washington, a clerk in the War Department. His testimony was so blunt that two women left the courtroom.

Varah said on a night in July, 1933, he drove a detective named Bradford and three other "operators" to a cemetery about a mile beyond Rockville. The detectives, he explained, had been hired by Mrs. Josephine Beall to gather evidence for a divorce suit in which she was to name Mrs. Lyddane as a corespondent.

Varah said he and his colleagues had been waiting a half hour when Beall and Mrs. Lyddane arrived in an automobile.

Leave Automobile.

"They got out of the car," Varah said, "and we waited about 15 minutes and then flashed our lights on them and found them in a compromising position."

At this point, Varah's testimony became so torrid that two of the women spectators hurried from the courtroom. Fifty or so others, however, remained.

Varah said that Detective Bradford yelled to Beall:

"Arthur, don't be alarmed."

When Beall and Mrs. Lyddane got back to their automobile, the witness said, Mrs. Lyddane shouted:

"Who are you, anyway?"

Defense attorneys made no attempt to halt Varah's sensational testimony. At the outset of the trial Stedman Prescott, chief of defense counsel, announced that they would be "brutally frank" about the "Anne-and-Arthur" affair.

That is one of the unusual aspects of the trial.

State's Attorney James H. Pugh is citing the blonde, blue-eyed matron's "notorious" conduct with Beall, a Darnestown garage owner, to establish a motive. He seeks to convince the jury that it was because of Mrs. Lyddane's infatuation for Beall that she hired Washington gangsters to murder Francis (Slom) Lyddane, her husband, and also Mrs. Beall.

May Charge Blackmail.

Prescott, on the other hand, has promised to be "brutally frank" about this affair to support the blackmail theory. Mrs. Lyddane, he has contended, paid money to the gangsters because they threatened to expose her relations with Beall.

Mrs. Lyddane is expected to take the witness stand tomorrow and testify that she was the victim of a blackmail plot.

"Slom" Lyddane, who has stood by his wife since she was arrested in their Rockville apartment April 1, 1935, also is expected to testify.

Their appearance will just about wind up testimony in the second trial, and the jury should be given the case late tomorrow or Friday.

The chief witness at this morning's session was Mrs. Beall, a middle-aged bespectacled brunette, attired in a black hat, a black crepe dress and yellow gloves. She took the stand after her husky husband had testified briefly about his friendship with Anne and about the divorce suit which Mrs. Beall filed and later withdrew.

Mrs. Beall said she had known Anne Lyddane for five years.

"Did you have any conversations with her?" Pugh asked.

"I did. She called me over the telephone several times. Sometimes she gave her name, but most of the calls were anonymous."

"What was the substance of the calls?"

"The anonymous calls always

Use '36 D. C. Budget in '37, Blanton Asks

His Resolution Would Cancel $5,700,000 Lump Sum.

Step Follows Deadlock of Conferees; Thomas to Counter Move.

By James D. Secrest.

Anticipating a deadlock on the 1937 District supply bill, Representative Thomas L. Blanton, chairman of the House conferees, yesterday introduced a joint resolution to continue 1936 appropriations, but with the $5,700,000 lump sum and the character education items deleted.

The resolution also would enact into law the provision in the District supply bill as it passed the House barring District employes earning $2,400 a year, or more, from engaging in outside work for pay.

Offered on the eve of another Senate-House parley, the resolution is expected to act as another wedge between the managers of the two houses.

The effect of the Blanton resolution, if adopted, would be to force the District government to operate on a budget of $10,000,000 less than the current year and $12,000,000 under the 1937 bill as it passed the Senate. The 1937 appropriations would amount to approximately $32,000,000, including permanent and indefinite appropriations.

All capital improvements would be halted, along with any new activities provided in the 1937 bill, and the local government would be held to a bare subsistence budget for the next fiscal year.

Thomas May Seek 1936 Sum.

Should the House conferees remain adamant in their refusal to accept Budget Bureau estimates for the 1937 bill, Senator Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, is expected to offer a joint resolution permitting the District to operate with the same budget as in the current year.

While such a continuing resolution would deprive the District of all new construction, it would continue the $5,700,000 Federal contribution, the character education appropriation, and would not carry the limitation on outside work by employes.

With both sides offering contrary continuing resolutions, another deadlock conceivably may occur and the District government might be threatened with a halt on all appropriations July 1.

The conferees, who broke up in a row ten days ago over the tax survey submitted to the Senate sub-committee by the Washington Board of Trade, will meet again at 10:30 o'clock this morning while the Senate deficiency sub-committee takes a recess.

No Agreement Indicated.

There is no indication, however, that the Senate and House managers are any nearer an amicable agreement than they were when the House conferees walked out of the last parley.

One of the House managers yesterday showed a disposition to compromise with the Senate by accepting the $5,700,000 on condition that the District tax rate be raised from $1.50 to $1.70. Blanton, however, stated he would not agree to any plan for raising the Federal contribution above the $2,700,000 voted by the House.

Blanton's resolution constitutes another betrayal of a "gentleman's agreement," made with the Senate sub-committee last year. At that time he allowed the Senate to restore the character education appropriation on condition the now famed red rider was accepted.

As a final "joker," the Texan proposes in his continuing resolution that the District government purchase from the Federal Government at "a fair value' 'the site in Judiciary Square upon which it is proposed to build the Police Court Building, for which the House appropriated an initial $1,000,000 this year.

The resolution seeks to set up a commission composed of the District tax assessor, the director of procurement of the Treasury Department and a nonresident to be appointed by the President.

Candidacy of Landon Is Assailed by Farley; Gov. Lehman to Quit

Leaders of Democrats Open Movement to Draft Executive.

Chances of Party Imperiled by Move

Bennett and Jackson Head Discussion of Likely Candidates.

By Franklyn Waltman.

Prospects of Democratic success in New York this fall may be weakened by Gov. Herbert H. Lehman's announcement yesterday that he would not be a candidate for re-election. His decision is a distinct blow at Democratic chances and in the end might open the way for a Republican victory in the Empire State.

This view is based on the fact that Gov. Lehman is an outstanding and influential Jew and that he would have attracted the major part of the large Jewish vote in New York City into the Democratic Party this year, as he has on previous occasions.

The Jews are particularly racial conscious this year because of the persecution of their co-religionists in Germany and due to fears that the anti-Semitic movement may spread. Consequently they feel quite kindly toward a party or political group which projects one of their number into high place.

President Roosevelt apparently is fully conscious of this sentiment and when he addressed the National Democratic Club in New York last month he went out of his way to heap encomiums on the head of Gov. Lehman. Now that Gov. Lehman has decided to step out of the picture it is certain that strenuous efforts will be made by President Roosevelt and his lieutenants to have the Governor reconsider his action.

Seek to Draft Governor.

In fact a "draft Lehman" movement was launched almost as soon as his announcement was relayed to Washington. Mr. Roosevelt sent out word through Marvin H. McIntyre, one of his secretaries, that he hoped Gov. Lehman would reconsider his decision and personally hoped he would run, after all.

Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York, asserted that "Gov. Lehman is so indispensable to the State that we will have to draft him." Chairman James A. Farley of the Democratic National Committee asserted that Gov. Lehman would be "a loss to the State and to the party." He said he thought the death of Gov. Lehman's brother last week might have brought about the decision not to seek re-election.

Robert Jackson, Internal Revenue Bureau counsel and a resident of Jamestown, N. Y., was suggested in New Deal circles here as a possible Democratic candidate for Governor if Gov. Lehman stands on the announcement he made today. Word from New York was that Attorney General John J. Bennett, jr., would figure also as a possible candidate.

If the Republicans nominate for the governorship an outstanding Jew, they would be certain to cut heavily into the Democratic following in New York City, not only in the gubernatorial contest but in the Presidential race as well.

Upstate New York is held certain to give the Republican Presidential candidate a sizable majority, but keen political observers in New York until yesterday doubted whether it would be sufficient to offset the Roosevelt majority in New York City.

But Gov. Lehman's decision may change that situation. It depends, of course, on the astuteness shown by the Democrats and Republicans in the selection of gubernatorial candidates. But yesterday's development should help in improving the morale of New York Republicans, because it gives them the first glimmering of the possibility of victory in the fall.

Lehman Makes Decision.

Mystery Rules Liberals' Talk With President

TVA, REA Are Touched on in 'General' Parley, Shipstead Says.

Political mystery surrounding a 3½ hour White House conference last night deepened when the seven liberal Senators who were present, emerged tight-lipped.

After meeting in the President's spacious second-floor study at 8:30 p. m., the group to a man insisted on talking about the weather when they appeared on the White House portico at midnight.

Present were the President's adviser, Dr. Felix Frankfurter, Harvard Law School faculty member; Senators Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), New York; Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), Montana; Lewis D. Schwellenbach (Democrat), Washington; Sherman Minton (Democrat), Indiana; George W. Norris (Republican), Nebraska; Robert M. La Follette (Progressive), Wisconsin, and Henrik Shipstead (Farmer-Labor), Minnesota.

Norris stayed only until 10:15 p. m., and said "No," pleasantly to all questions. He added that Frankfurter was "listening in."

The rest, at midnight, ended the vigil of a score of reporters by emerging to talk blithely of "the effect of the sun spots on the weather."

All insisted that the discussion was absolutely general. Several said that the Supreme Court's adverse decision Monday on the Guffey coal act had been mentioned, but "only in the form of jokes."

Shipstead amplified the "just general" statements with word that the Tennessee Valley Authority and rural electrification had been discussed.

The conferees said invitations for the meeting had been tendered a week ago.

The mystery surrounding the conference came from the fact that the group as a whole, does not represent any particular bloc of legislation or any particular sector of the country. The only classification fitting all of them would be "liberals."

The surmise was strong that politics, in the form of some sort of bid for the left-wing vote of all parties, was a primary topic of conversation. Significance was attached to the absence of the usual Democratic wheelhorses, such as Senator Joseph T. Robinson (Democrat), Arkansas, or Senator Pat Harrison (Democrat), Mississippi, at the conference. The four Democrats present are of the "Young Turk" type, while Norris is a Progressive Republican, La Follette a Progressive, and Shipstead a Farmer-Laborite. Frankfurter is often classified as "No. 1 Braintruster."

Most reporters decided that while the discussion was general, and while probably no definite conclusions were reached, the gathering was significant in that political strategy was supposedly outlined.

Governor Is Recognized as Likely Opponent for First Time.

Kansan Unknown, Chairman Declares

Couzens, 5 Democrats Indorsed at Parley in Michigan.

Political Highlights.

The national Democratic organization recognized Gov. Landon of Kansas as the likely Republican presidential nominee, and National Chairman Farley turned the party's guns on him as "destitute of experience."

Gov. Herbert Lehman of New York, who was counted on to help President Roosevelt carry New York State this fall by again occupying a place on the Democratic ticket, announced that he would not run.

Michigan Democrats, in State convention, indorsed Republican Senator James Couzens and five Democrats for the Democratic senatorial nomination.

The President also was given the 16 votes of South Carolina by the Democratic convention in that State.

Republican National Chairman Fletcher in a statement sought to correct an impression that the G. O. P. convention is to be given a "vaudeville" or "musical festival" character.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Grand Rapids, Mich., May 20.—Recognizing Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas as the probable Republican nominee for the Presidency, James A. Farley, Democratic national chairman, and, in that capacity, representative of President Roosevelt in the President's campaign for re-election, tonight for the first time assailed the Kansas executive.

Speaking before the Michigan Democratic convention at Grand Rapids, Farley did not mention Gov. Landon by name, but identified him as "the Governor of a typical prairie State" and used the name of Kansas in his reference.

Election of the Republican Governor would be a "perilous experiment," the Democratic chairman said in his speech. He called Landon, twice Governor of his State, "destitute of experience" and unheard of a little more than a year ago. He said he "guessed" the Kansan was being elevated because "the DuPont Liberty League crowd is less afraid of him than it is of more widely known, and more experienced statesmen who have been mentioned in connection with the Republican nomination."

The Democratic chairman derided claims that Michigan is a "doubtful" State and declared he did not feel that "even Kansas is a doubtful State if the competition is to be as I have surmised."

Cites New Deal's Acts.

After detailing activities of the Administration in combating the economic crisis since March, 1933, Farley said:

"We do not yet know just what Republican figure will be put up to oppose Franklin D. Roosevelt next November. From present indications, it appears probable it will be a gentleman of whom none of you had even heard a little more than a year ago.

"Talk about reckless experiments in government, which is one of our critics' favorite charges against the Administraton! Could there be a more perilous experiment than putting the complex, and highly delicate, control of our Government into the hands of a man destitute of experience and devoid of practice in national, still less in international, matters?

"You knew Roosevelt. He had been in public life from early manhood as a member of the New York Legislature. He had been part of the Woodrow Wilson Administration. He had twice been an eminently successful Governor of the most populous State in the Union. Responsibility was nothing new to him. The problems of administration he had encountered in almost every form.

"What do you know about the individual who now appears as the

Zioncheck's Landlady Laments 'The Bad Boy's' Housekeeping

The private life of Representative Marion A. Zioncheck, as mirrored by his home surroundings, was swept into the open yesterday as his landlady, prior to formally dispossessing him, showed off the erstwhile lodgings to newspapermen.

It seemed the consensus of the visiting delegation that the former bachelor wasn't as able a housekeeper as he was facile in becoming arrested for violations of our silly little traffic laws.

There was pathos, too. Real tears brimmed in the eyes of Mrs. Benjamin J. Young, magazine writer, as she looked over her possessions in the Harvard Hall apartment which she sublet to Zioncheck on Christmas Day as she was leaving on a South American trip.

"I had read and heard about Mr. Zioncheck's recent career," said Mrs. Young, "but I didn't think that anything like this had happened."

Mrs. Young was referring to Zioncheck's housekeeping.

She was not referring to a matter of dust under the radiators or a few dishes in the sink or other such minor measures of housekeeping. She said:

"My lovely furniture is all marred. Some of it is broken. The place looks like a pig sty."

As Mrs. Young and her delegation entered the apartment, they stepped over two of the Representative's hats on the living room floor.

On to the kitchen.

"My dishes," sobbed Mrs. Young, "have been thrown out of the window."

Through broken window panes,

Tax Committee Delays Report Till Next Week

25% Corporation Levy, Dividend Exemption to 40% Studied.

By Robert C. Albright.

Torn between a multiplicity of substitutes for the Administration's proposed undistributed corporate earnings tax, the Senate Finance Committee yesterday delayed a vote on the pivotal business tax issue, but gave speedy approval to an 80 per cent "windfall" tax on refunded processing levies.

Sentiment continued to lean heavily away from earnings tax principles of the House bill, as the committee cleared minor tax problems away from the path of a probable test ballot today on the corporation levy. Quickly the committee revised and accepted new methods of taxing non-resident aliens, the "windfall" tax, and refunds to certain processors hit by the outlawed AAA taxes.

A plethora of revenue estimates on 11 different substitutes for the Administration's proposed corporations tax, ranging in yield from $536,000,000 to $835,000,000, was presented by the Treasury, and members carried these figures away with them to study overnight before selecting one or a combination of the plans today or tomorrow.

New Corporate Tax.

Attracting some favorable committee comment was an entirely new plan submitted by experts, discarding direct taxation on withheld earnings as such, but retaining the philosophy. This proposal imposes a flat corporation income tax of 25 per cent but permits exemption from the tax up to 40 per cent of dividends distributed. The proposal calls for repeal of the present capital stock and excess profits tax, and imposition of the normal 4 per cent income tax on dividends. It would raise $641,000,000.

It was notable that this plan contained no provision for hiking the individual income tax rate from 4 to 5 per cent—a proposal put forward as a basis for compromise by Chairman Pat Harrison, which already has begun to draw protests. Regular party men consider it bad campaign medicine.

Delayed action by the committee moved Congress another day nearer the June 6 adjournment deadline and projected Senate receipt of the tax bill along with the relief measure definitely into next week. Leaders were obviously concerned over whether action on these two "must" bills can be completed in two weeks. Whatever tax bill the Senate approves, a conference controversy with the House appears certain, and the same is true of the relief bill. There was more talk in the lobbies of a recess over the period of the Republican National Convention.

Nine Changes Approved.

Before approving the proposed 80 per cent tax on processing tax refunds, the committee yesterday made nine modifying changes in the House draft. The House "windfall" section was revised to exempt from the tax a processor who could show a loss for an entire taxable year in a commodity on which a processing tax was imposed. The processor would be given a choice of using the average net income for a year on the taxed commodities, instead of computing income on the basis of each separate transaction in the commodities. Changes in direct manufacturing costs could be included in determining whether processors benefited. Payment of the tax could be made over three years.

The committee voted a 10 per cent flat income tax on non-resident alien individuals who are not engaged in trade or business in the United States, and do not have an office here. An exception was made in the case of aliens living in contiguous countries (Canada and Mexico), where a 5 per cent rate was levied.

The committee decided that non-resident alien individuals who are engaged in trade or business in the United States, or who have an office here, would be subject to the same income tax rate as American citizens, except that a $1,000 credit would be allowed. Residents of Canada and Mexico would be allowed an additional $400 credit for each dependent.

Withheld at Source.

The tax on nonresident aliens would be withheld at the source. They are now subject only to the regular individual income tax rates.

Before quitting for the day, the committee revised and approved House provisions granting refunds on AAA floor stock taxes, and taxes paid on commodities exported and sold to charitable institutions.

Earlier in the afternoon the committee examined Treasury revenue estimates on conflicting tax substitutes. The most drastic would raise $835,000,000 by imposing a 30 per cent flat corporation income tax, but allowing a 50 per cent credit for dividends distributed. The least productive would impose only a 15 per cent corporate income tax, but graduate surtaxes from 30 to 45 per cent on all corporate income retained over 30 per cent. It would raise only $536,000,000.

The committee was told it could raise $730,000,000 by applying a plan put forward at one time by Chairman Harrison and said to have originated with Chairman Marriner S. Eccles, of the Federal Reserve Board. This plan would continue the present 15 per cent corporation income tax rate. After an exemption of $15,000, it would tax 40 per cent all earnings up to 50 per cent retained by a corporation, and impose a 60 per cent levy on all over 50 per cent retained.

The Treasury reported that a plan by Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, to impose a flat corporation tax of 23 per cent, out of which the corporation could recoup the normal tax on dividends actually distributed to stockholders, would raise $639,500,000. This plan contemplated raising the individual income tax rate from 4 to 5 per cent.

Republicans Lament Failure of Anti-New Deal Democrats to Bolt President.

By Franklyn Waltman

MUCH lamenting has been heard recently among Republicans over the failure of certain anti-New Deal Democrats to proclaim their intentions to bolt President Roosevelt—or at least, to keep up a running bitter attack on the Administration. From some of these comments one would gather that certain Senate Democrats had become deserters of some kind because they choose to remain within their party ranks.

WALTMAN

The distinguished Mark Sullivan in a recent article is disturbed that apparently Senator Carter Glass, after blasting the New Deal for three years, will remain "regular" and he hopes that the country will not lose its faith in him. He wonders whether the explanation for such regularity is that Senator Glass and Senator Josiah W. Bailey, of North Carolina, are candidates for re-election and must run on the same ticket as Roosevelt.

Sullivan concedes that such thoughts amount to cynicism and, while he is reluctant to dwell on such cynical thoughts, he asserts that "but with all allowances made one hardly can deny that there is material for cynicism in the spectacle before us." And he goes on to point out that those anti-New Deal Democrats in public life who hope to remain there—Glass, Tydings, Byrd, Bailey and others—apparently have decided to "go along" while the anti-New Deal Democrats outside of public life remain outspoken.

"The contrast in candor between Democratic leaders with 'ex' before their names, and those still in office and hoping to continue in, can hardly fail to suggest reflections about the triumph of expediency over conviction," Sullivan asserts.

Mr. Sullivan's remarks reflect accurately talk prevalent among Republicans recently. The complaint that a few Democrats will not continue to help the Republican cause is, indeed, a confession that the once great Republican Party has fallen to a low state of impotence. The country normally has been Republican, and if the leaders of that party showed the aggressive, intelligent leadership they should, they would not need worry about what a handful of Democrats do.

For three years Senator Glass, who, at his age, might have liked to spend the sunset of his life in more peaceful pursuits, has been in the thick of the fight against the New Deal measures. While the Republican floor leader sat struck with inertia and virtually all on his side of the Senate chamber seemed afflicted with the same malady, it was Senator Glass who spoke out against the New Deal and, at times, assumed the leadership of the opposition.

Did the Senate Republicans fall in behind him—did they use as a springboard to demonstrate to the country the defects and fallacies of the Roosevelt program the Virginian's honest and intelligent opposition to most of the New Deal measure since declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court? They did not. They assumed an attitude that it was not necessary for them to do anything when good Democrats could be found to oppose the President.

But what is worse, they voted for many of the measures which they now denounce, leaving the way open for Senator James F. Byrnes gloatingly to tell the South Carolina Democratic State Convention that "the record will show a majority of Republicans (in Congress) voting for every act declared unconstitutional."

And when the Republicans have bestirred themselves, it has been to make silly speeches about people eating dog meat or harangues so dull that the galleries, including the press section, have quickly emptied. It is no wonder that former Senator George H. Moses, remembering the one-time glory of his party, is now thoroughly disgusted with it!

Even today where does the opposition to New Deal proposals come from on Capitol Hill? With the exception of Senator Arthur Vandenberg, it does not come from the Republicans. Even though they are on the eve of a Presidential election they cannot shake off their lethargy and inertia. What did the Republicans do about the pending tax bills? Nothing. It was a Democrat, Senator Harry F. Byrd, who, by the exercise of a little energy, blew the Administration proposal sky-high.

What have the Republicans done about the relief measure? Despite revelations that the relief funds in many places are being used by the Democratic Administration chiefly for partisan, political purposes, the Republicans seem contented. They apparently are too apathetic even to read these revelations in their daily papers, much less demand an investigation of them. And when they know what it is all about, they seem to fear that perhaps someone might think they were hard-hearted fellows opposed to relief—in favor of letting people starve—if they made demands for a decent, sensible handling of this difficult question.

Why does not Senator Glass do it? they ask. He is chairman of the Appropriations Committee. Why doesn't he expose these rascals in power? Well, the old fellow must be giving away to expediency—must be forgetting his convictions!

Let it be asked: Who but the Republicans have played a game of expediency since the New Deal started? Who but they in the beginning took the position that, despite convictions Mr. Roosevelt was too popular to oppose?

Nor, may it also be said, has Senator Glass forsaken his convictions for expediency, even though he may not bolt his party. There is no need for expediency on his part, since he has no opposition in Virginia for re-election. He is as ready to speak out today as he ever was—and his Lynchburg newspaper fearlessly strikes out at New Deal measures when its editors disagree with them. But Senator Glass has no intention of being a catspaw for a group too apathetic even to help itself.

WPA's Silence On Mrs. Meyer Charges Cited

Sen. Austin Tells Women Failure to Answer Is 'Admission of Guilt.'

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, May 20.—Failure of WPA officials to answer charges made by Mrs. Agnes E. Meyer in her Washington Post articles revealing relief conditions in Westchester County, N. Y., is "an admission of guilt," Senator Austin (Republican), Vermont, told members of the Westchester County Women's Republican Club here today.

Senator Austin praised Mrs. Meyer "for her unbiased disclosure of the inefficiency, waste and political abuse of the WPA" in Westchester.

"Mrs. Meyer charged the WPA in Westchester County with corruption, racketeering and inefficiency, as well as that low form of tyranny which characterizes the New Deal—snooping among her papers," he said. "What is the answer from the New Deal? Silence.

Generalizations Contradicted.

"To be sure, Mr. Hopkins has given out some general figures on the national situation. But what weight can be given to generalizations relating to national figures when the only specific analysis of WPA operations contradicts these generalizations?

"Silence is not only an admission; but when the circumstance of public good, as here, requires an answer, silence is an admission of guilt."

Senator Austin denounced centralization of power in the White House as inimical to better living, to educational freedom and to high ethical standards in the homes of America.

"The raising of the cost of living and the lowering of real wages by statute is the most cruel form of taxation," he said. "The power to do this was not granted by the people to the Federal Government, but was withheld from it by the bill of rights.

Seized Power.

"Nevertheless, the New Deal seized this power and exercised it in the NRA, the AAA, the banking act of 1933, the gold reserve act of 1934 and the tariff act of 1934. It is further sought in the thirty-hour bill, the price-fixing bills, the appropriation bills and the tax bill."

He said re-election of the New Deal would amount to approval of constitutional amendments, proposed and pending, "which would enable Congress to pass these powers on to the President."

"The New Deal written into an amendment shocks the conscience of the Nation because its import is visible, but the same thing already attempted by mere students, severally proposed and some enacted, escapes recognition because only a single surreptitious step is seen at a time," he said.

Senator Austin declared that the "freedom of workers and of employers can be preserved only if the New Deal is destroyed."

Ann Harding Faces New Fight for Child

Reno, Nev., May 20 (AP).—Harry Bannister, divorced husband of Ann Harding, blonde film actress, reopened the court battle over custody today of their 7-year-old daughter, Jane, here today.

Samuel Platt, attorney for Bannister, filed a motion in district court today to set aside modification of the original divorce decree whereby District Judge Thomas F. Moran gave Miss Harding the exclusive custody of their young daughter.

Under terms of a separation agreement approved in 1932, the actress was given custody of Jane for ten months of each year, and Bannister was given her custody for the remaining two months.

Fliers Forced Down On Record Attempt

Miami, Fla., May 20 (AP).—Forced down by lack of fuel, R. F. Turner and George Craig, seeking a light plane distance record, landed at 3:30 p. m. today at Boca Raton, after a 732-mile non-stop flight from Raleigh, N. C., aviation officials here were advised.

Lack of six gallons of gasoline forced their landing, but the young aviators were believed to have achieved a record for planes of their type. The previous non-stop distance record for third category stock planes was 580 miles.

Two Democrats Are Named in Relief Politics

Sen. Reynolds, Doughton Blamed; Ridder Denies Harvey Testimony.

By the Associated Press.

The office of Senator Dickinson (Republican), Iowa, named Senator Reynolds and Representative Doughton, North Carolina Democrats, yesterday as the "powerful Washington figures" Dickinson accused earlier this week of putting politics into relief.

Dickinson's secretary made public photostatic copies of two letters which the Iowan read with all names omitted, on the Senate floor Monday.

Both letters were addressed to Eugene A. Russell, of Boone, N. C. The one bearing the name of Senator Reynolds said in part:

"If you will furnish this office with a letter of recommendation from the Democratic chairman of your county or Reynolds manager, I will be more than glad to take your case up with the Works Progress Administration in Watauga County and do everything I can in an effort to help you. This procedure is followed in all instances."

The letter bearing the name of Doughton, who is chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, said:

"I note your desire to secure a position with the WPA. I am taking this matter up with Mr. Rivers today, requesting him, if possible, to find some place for you.

Not in Control.

"Of course, I do not control these appointments, but I am glad to render my Democratic friends any assistance I can."

Victor F. Ridder, WPA administrator for New York City, last night charged Borough President George U. Harvey, of Queens, New York City, with "inaccuracies" in his testimony on Tuesday before the Senate appropriations committee, on WPA activities in his borough.

Ridder's charge was contained in a letter to the committee chairman, Senator Carter Glass (Democrat), Virginia.

Ridder denied there was duplication between the Queens Borough president's office and the Works Progress Administration. He said the WPA found it necessary to provide Harvey's office with 80 full-time employes and 90 others who "should have been provided by the borough without cost to the WPA," in order to complete projects.

Hardly Excessive.

With regard to Harvey's testimony on salaries being paid WPA engineers, Ridder said the WPA had 19 employes in Queens receiving more than $2,100 a year and that "this can hardly be considered excessive for a monthly expenditure of $1,500,000."

Ridder said that on April 31 there were 12,064 workers in Queens, and 1,683 supervisory employes, whereas Harvey stated that "at the present time there are a total of 10,977 workers as compared with 1,915 administrative employes."

"His statement that we had 2,056 supervisory workers who were exempt from relief status is doubly inaccurate," Ridder said, "because as a matter of fact on May 15 we had 1,694 supervisory employes assigned to Queens and of this number 1,565 came from relief rolls."

House Committee Reports 7 D. C. Bills

Although the Sisson bill is expected to consume practically all the legislative time which will be allowed the District in the House before adjournment, the House District Committee yesterday reported seven bills.

The only major bill is the narcotics control measure asked by the Commissioners and adopted by the Senate.

The other six authorize the furnishing of steam to the District government from the central heating plant; increase from $30,000 to $50,000 the appropriation for the District vocational rehabilitation service, place the supervision of wrestling under the District Boxing Commission, name four streets in the Mall for Maine, Oklahoma, Missouri and Maine, and authorize the Steuart Bros., Inc., to lay a pipe line.

Because of the opposition of Representative Ellenbogen (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, the committee tabled a bill which would permit the District Commissioners to refund large tax payments, erroneously paid, to oil companies.

Parcel Auction Brings Circus To Postoffice

Striped Wash Boilers, Ties and Dresses Are Sold to Highest Bidders.

The performance was the public auction of unclaimed articles which had accumulated during the last 11 months at the Dead Parcel Post Division.

Starting at 10 a. m. before a capacity audience of 400, the show ran continuously at the city postoffice until 6 p. m. By that time the supply of clothing, household accessories, automobile tires and gewgaws was as exhausted as the auctioneers' voices and the bidders' pocketbooks. And by that time approximately $2,000 had been collected for the Treasury Department from the dead parcel post.

The three ringmasters were recruited from the Postoffice Department and, in their roles as auctioneers, whipped the crowd into excitement over the possibility of carrying off a rural mail box, a sled, a batch of baby rubber pants, an assortment of souvenir postcards, a striped tin wash boiler and miscellaneous gloves, all for a price.

Orange Dress.

After some wild bidding a woman got an orange crepe dress for 50 cents, a grandmotherly looking person bought for a similar amount a bunch of five cute little white hats modeled after a gob's cap, and a swarthy man paid $2.50 for an armful of woman's silk underwear in raidbow shades and heavily trimmed with flossy lace.

After competing with several other men bidders, a man got a blue and white striped wash tub for $1.25. The women were silent while this article was being auctionde.

But they went in heavily for men's ties and scarfs and socks, buying enough to see them through several seasons of gift-giving.

Some of the women bought dresses, hats, and stockings without knowing what size they were purchasing. One trustful soul paid $2.50 for ten pairs of stockings, not knowing whether they were size 8 or 10½. They'll probably work up nicely into a crocheted rug.

Fun for Auctioneers.

The auctioneers had as much fun as the bidders; probably more, since it didn't cost themanything. Christopher Zepp, a city postoffice employe, harangued the crowd in great style while he was bossing the show. He held up women's dresses in front of him and minced across the stage in the manner of a ballerina. He wrapped a bed spread around him and strutted like an Indian chief. He kidded the cash customers and cracked jokes for those who had come only to look on.

The two other auctioneers were more quiet. Still the merchandise rolled out and the money poured in. Charles Kracke, an employe in the dead parcel post division, was so straightforward and business-like that, almost before they realized it, sensible men and women paid $2 for a pie knife, $1.75 for a lot of miscellaneous tobacco, $1.50 for six decks of playing cards and 75 cents for a small box of assorted loose beads.

The technique of the third auctioneer, Postoffice Clerk Austin G. Pahlow, was just as devastating. His manner was so wistful and confidential that one woman, without a moment's hesitation, bought 12 knitted berets, all alike.

Some of the spectators, fearing they would miss part of the performance, had brought sandwiches and oranges, which they consumed.

Defense Denies Bathtub Death; Blames 'Fiend'

Counsel Says Fiorenza's Confession to Slaying Lacks Foundation.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 20.—Denying "absolutely" that John Fiorenza had anything to do with the slaying of Mrs. Nancy Evans Titterton, defense counsel set out today to show that a "fiend" operating in the neighborhood had assaulted and strangled the dark-haired author-critic.

Henry Klauber, attorney for the 24-year-old apprentice upholsterer on trial for the killing, declared that a few days before Mrs. Titterton was slain the "fiend" attempted to assault another woman in the same Beekman place apartment.

The lawyer promised to produce the woman, whom he declined to identify, as a defense witness.

After a day of testimony designed to support the State's contention that Fiorenza should be sent to the electric chair as the confessed slayer, Klauber told reporters:

"Any admission made by the defendant relative to an attack on Mrs. Titterton is entirely without foundation in fact and a figment of his imagination."

The day's most dramatic testimony came from the victim's husband, Lewis H. Titterton, a broadcasting company executive.

With a slight catch in his voice, Titterton told of viewing his wife's body in the bathtub of their apartment after being summoned from his office on the day of the crime.

In his opening statement, District Attorney Dodge told how Fiorenza, who had repaired a sofa for the Titterton, was linked with the crime when a 13-inch piece of string found under the body was traced to the shop where he worked.

"And we broke down the alibi he had prepared," Dodge declared, "and he confessed to the commission of this crime."

Klauber, referring to the defendant as "Johnny," pictured him to the jury as an irresponsible youth who would "admit anything that the police suggested."

Eugene Field's Frat Brothers To Help Widow Save Home

Denied $3,000 Loan by HOLC, House Was to Be Sold at Foreclosure in Next Few Days; Aid Also Is Requested From President Roosevelt.

By the Associated Press.

Heafford Junction, Wis., May 20.—A happy ending apparently neared tonight in a northwoods drama involving the aged widow of Eugene Field, beloved children's poet, and her effort to save her home from sale under a foreclosure judgment.

With a hearing on confirmation of the sale only three days away, fraternity brothers of the author of "Little Boy Blue," wired an offer to advance the $3,000 needed to satisfy the judgment.

Shortly after this was announced, word was received from St. Louis that Jesse P. Henry, chairman of a civic committee restoring Field's childhood home, had made telegraphic appeal to President Roosevelt for help.

Eugene Field 2d said he believed his mother would accept the "fraternity's splendid offer," which was relayed by J. R. Mitchell, alumni commissioner of the New York Chapter of Phi Delta Theta, only a few hours after Mrs. Field's predicament became public.

For the last few years she had kept herself so secluded that few persons knew that the helpmate of the gay poet, who died in 1895, was still living.

The junior Field said assurance of aid also had been received from the St. Louis group.

While friends took up the 80-year-old widow's fight, she lay seriously ill at her beautiful Crystal Lake dwelling, 4 miles from here. Her son said she had suffered three heart attacks after her application for a $3,000 loan was rejected by the HOLC. A physician was in attendance for nearly three hours yesterday.

Fields, who manages the property and acts as Mrs. Field's nurse, said his mother's income from royalties in his father's poems had dwindled in recent years.

Punitive Claim In Suit Against Dill Ruled Out

Testimony Is Completed at Alienation of Affections Trial of Ex-Senator.

By the Associated Press.

Mount Vernon, Ohio, May 20.—Testimony in Margie Heaton Dill's $25,000 alienation of affections suit was completed late today after an unsuccessful effort to inject a claim for punitive damages aainst former Senator C. C. Dill, uncle of the plaintiff's estranged husband and one of the defendants.

Common Pleas Judge Philip Wilkins immediately overruled a renewed defense motion to dismiss the case against the former Senator and allow a jury of eight women and four men to decide only the action against his sister-in-law and co-defendant, Mrs. Grace Dill.

"What are you worth, Senator?" Plaintiff's Counsel R. L. Carr suddenly asked Dill.

L. C. Stillwell, defense lawyer, objected.

"Don't you know," Carr shouted back, "that in a case of this kind the jury can assess punitive damages?"

Judge Wilkins quickly ruled, however, that "punitive damages can follow only from malice, and none was charged in this case."

Former Senator Dill and Mrs. Grace Dill testified. Both entered blanket denials to charges of scheming to break up the marriage of Wendell Dill and Margie Heaton Dill, both of whom were 18 years old when they were secretly married two years ago.

The two defendants also contradicted Margie Dill's testimony that her mother-in-law took her to Washington in June, 1934, and there arranged an illegal operation on the plaintiff by a woman listed in directories as a "clairvoyant."

Wendell Dill, husband of the plaintiff, asserted he had been "threatened" with arrest by the plaintiff's sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Oren George, unless he married Margie before leaving for Washington, where he obtained a Government job.

The Georges contradicted his testimony on rebuttal.

Judge Wilkins instructed opposing attorneys to prepare final summations and indicated he expected to give the case to the jury tomorrow afternoon.

Student Killing, Suicide Blamed On Overstudy

Inquiry Into Williams College Gun Deaths of Two Closed Abruptly.

By the United Press.

Williamstown, Mass., May 20.—Investigation into the Williams College tragedy in which an honor student suddenly turned two-gun killer was closed abruptly tonight.

Officials agreed that "a case of mental derangement," probably induced by overstudy, prompted Lewis Jack Somers, jr., 19-year-old freshman, to shoot and kill a classmate, wound another and take his own life last night.

Son of a prominent Meriden, Conn., attorney, Somers slew Robert Paul Henneberry, 19, and wounded William Homer Hartz, jr., 18, both sons of wealthy Chicagoans, before discharging the guns into his own temples.

Hartz was recovering at the college infirmary from a bullet wound in the left shoulder. It was expected he would be discharged in a day or two.

Decision to end the investigation was announced by Assistant District Attorney Harold R. Goewey of Berkshire County, after a conference with college, medical and police authorities. Earlier, police said, a routine inquest into the campus tragedy would be held "within three weeks."

Meanwhile, bodies of the murder-suicide victims were taken from a local undertaking parlor after autopsies were performed by Dr. James W. Bunce, Berkshire Medical County examiner.

Henneberry's body was en route to Chicago by train for burial there at request of his father, George Henneberry, wealthy rotogravure printer, who flew to Chicago from Miami, last night, after being advised of his son's death.

Somer's body was sent to Troy, N. Y., for cremation on instruction of his parents, who arrived here today from Meridan.

The triple shooting occurred in Henneberry's third-floor room in Lehman Hall—dormitory named for Gov. Herbert H. Lehman of New York.

As Police Chief Royal reconstructed the crime, seven shots were fired in all. The first pierced Henneberry's left leg. A quickly fired second bullet entered Henneberry's skull from behind. Hartz was the next target. His left shoe stopped the next bullet, which pierced the sole of the shoe at the arch. The next struck him above the collarbone of the left shoulder. The fifth went wild. The last two Somers sent into his own brain from either pistol.

Somers used two Spanish type 25-caliber pistols he had purchased from a New York mail order house several days ago.

The youth, an "A" student in four subjects, but a near-failure in mathematics, was said by classmates to have a number of eccentricities. While training for the freshman wrestling team he was said to have eaten raw meat. He also ate an excessive amount of candy and had his meals alone on a $3 weekly food budget. Three months ago he purchased 200 half-cent stamps and used them on all his letters.

Auto Shop Strike Parleys Arranged

Conferences with representatives of Hill & Tibbitts, Inc., and with leaders of the Washington Automotive Trade Association have been arranged by union officials for today in hopes of ending the auto mechanics' strike.

Oliver N. Garrison, International Association Machinists delegate, said Hill & Tibbitts representatives and union delegates would air their grievances before Howard T. Colvin, Department of Labor conciliator, at 10:30 a. m. today.

The meeting with Washington Automotive Association leaders has been scheduled for the afternoon. No further strikes will be called pending these meetings.

The strike was called May 13, when the union demanded a 44-hour week and 90 cents an hour for journeymen mechanics.

New Deal Wins Right to Show Work Program

Justice Wheat Rules U. S. May Show How Power Plan Makes Jobs.

By the United Press.

The New Deal, fighting utility injunctions seeking to halt its $200,000,000 municipal power program, closed its case in the District of Columia Supreme Court yesterday after winning a ruling that it was entitled to show how its program created jobs in other industries.

Four utility companies have contended the program is part of a drive to force down utility rates. New Deal lawyers maintained that it was an employment-spurring scheme. In support of this argument they brought in charts showing that for every man put to work directly in the power program four others obtained employment in other lines. Utility lawyers objected.

Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat studied the 12 chandeliers in his courtroom and then decided to admit the evidence of the charts. The chandeliers, he pointed out, illustrated the very point of issue—the indirect creation of jobs.

Trial Nearing End.

The three-week trial in which four utility companies are seeking permanent injunctions against the program neared an end with the Federal testimony of Herman A. Byers, statistician of the Department of Labor. Only oral arguments of opposing counsel, scheduled for tomorrow, remained to be heard.

They will feature Newton D. Baker, former Secretary of War, and Jerome N. Frank, public works administration power expert.

Byers, with an armful of colored charts to explain his points, testified that, for every man employed on the sites of six New Deal-financed municipal power projects, four found work in mining, transportation or manufacturing industries to produce materials.

Byers said that, out of the $536,365 allotted the six publicly owned power plants, $61,046 created 85,529 man-hours of employment at the scene of the projects. He said another $400,582 went for materials and 380,000 more man-heurs were developed from their manufacture.

Dean Acheson, former Undersecretary of the Treasury, objected to Byers' testimony.

Decides for Government.

Chief Justice Wheat then teetered in his high-back chair, gazed at the dozen lighting fixtures in his courtroom and said:

"Now, those chandeliers are made of brass. They have copper wires and glass shades. Of course, there were men who worked on them before they arrived in this courtroom. Objection overruled."

The judge held for the Government again a moment later when he refused the request of the utility attorneys to introduce newspaper advertisements to show that the New Deal's policy of making an outright grant of 45 per cent of a project cost influenced municipal elections.

The four companies contesting the suit are the Alabama Power Co., the Iowa City (Iowa) Light & Power Co., the Oklahoma Utilities Co. and the Texas Utilities Co.

Discuss Substitute for Invalidated Guffey Bill

Outside the Capitol, Representatives Fred M. Vinson, of Kentucky, and J. Buell Snyder, of Pennsylvania, discuss new legislation introduced in House yesterday by Vinson as substitute for the Guffey-Snyder coal-control measures invalidated by the Supreme Court.

New Coal Bill Is Drawn

price-fixing was valid and that the other five had outlawed it because they felt it could not be separated from the labor provisions of the act.

Referring to the new bill, he said that "the power of Congress to be exercised under this bill is its undisputed power under the Constitution to regulate interstate commerce."

John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, said that his organization would join in requesting that Congress enact the bill in the present session.

"The bill has been drafted on a basis that seems to meet the requirements of the Supreme Court," he said. "It will operate to maintain the equilibrium of the coal industry pending further study of stabilization of the industry."

Charles O'Neill, chairman of the special legislative committee of the National Conference of Bituminous Coal Producers, addressed a letter to all coal producers in the United States, in which he said:

"All operators are urged to support this bill as a constitutional measure drafted in full accordance with the decision of the Supreme Court and as the only practical solution of the chaotic marketing situation in which the industry inevitably finds itself when without price protection."

O'Neill asked the operators to telegraph President Roosevelt urging immediate support of the measure and to wire or write to Senators and Representatives requesting their support. He urged prompt action in view of the nearness of adjournment.

From Jouett Shouse, president of the American Liberty League, came a demand to know whether President Roosevelt proposes a constitutional amendment to carry out the policies of the New Deal in view of the decisions against New Deal laws.

"Isn't it about time for the Administration to take the American people into its confidence and announce frankly what it proposes to do about reconciling New Deal visions with fundamental constitutional law?" he asked.

He said it appeared to be obvious that New Deal objectives cannot be reached under the Constitution.

Peter Van Horn, president of the National Federation of Textiles, Inc., declared that the industry "apparently is headed for depression conditions" as a consequence of the Guffey decision. A proposal for a "little NRA" for the textile industry is pending in Congress, but apparently is outlawed by the decision.

Francis J. Gorman, first vice president of the United Textile Workers of America, said his organization would intensify its fight for the textile legislation in spite of the Guffey decision. He said manufacturers in the industry had begun wage slashing as a result of the ruling. He added that the textile bill does not rest on the same foundation as the outlawed Guffey law.

Roosevelt Gets Broad Powers In Flood Bill

Senate Would Allow Him to Determine Priority of Control Projects.

A Senate determined to keep the $384,000,000 omnibus flood-control bill free from "pork barrel" charges yesterday battered down all amendments for flood projects not approved by the Army Board of Engineers, but it yielded to the pleas of Democratic Majority Leader Robinson and accepted the amendment of Senator Hayden (Democrat), Arizona, giving President Roosevelt authority to determine priority in allocating funds for projects.

The decision, giving the President control over which projects shall be started first came after a bitter fight led by Senator Clark (Democrat), Missouri, and Minority Leader McNary, of Oregon. By a vote of 40 to 31, the Administration forces beat down Senator Clark's amendment to retain control of the program in the Army Corps of Engineers. Ten Democrats joined with 20 Republicans and one Farmer-Laborite in seeking to block the transfer of authority.

Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, led off the attack against the Hayden amendment, which had been approved last week by the Commerce Committee. He asked what "justification" there was for taking authority from the non-partisan Corps of Army Engineers and transferring it to the President.

Senator Clark replied that there was no justification, and he said he was convinced that should the power of decision be given to the President, New England, New York and Pennsylvania would be the first areas of the country to get flood control works. He asserted the remainder of the United States would be "subordinated" for political reasons.

Senator McNary contended the President is too overburdened to supervise the flood-control program.

Defeat late in the afternoon of an amendment offered by Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, to build a $15,000,000 dam on the Big Horn River, led Chairman Copeland to believe the threat of a bill weighed down with "pork" had been averted.

Senator Wheeler, in his drive to open the measure for amendments, was aided by Senator Clark and by Senator Russell (Democrat), of Georgia.

Copeland pleaded the bill be kept "porkless." He waved aloft the famous "green book" containing approved flood projects totaling $8,000,000,000, and said if the Wheeler proposal were adopted, there was no reason why they should not be incorporated in the bill.

After two hours of acrid debate, the amendment was rejected on a voice vote.

At the request of Minority Leader McNary, final disposition of the bill was delayed until today.

Two major hurdles still face the bill. A bloc led by Senator Davis (Re-(Republican), Pennsylvania, and by Senator Bilbo (Democrat), of Mississippi, have served notice that they will force a showdown today on their effort to eliminate a provision requiring States to pay land damage costs incurred in the construction of flood works.

The other difficulty was the announcement by Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, that he would combat a committee amendment to set up a five-member National Resources Board to make reports on the operation of flood control and related subjects.

Senator Hayden, of Arizona, is the amendment's author, and it is known the President favors it. It would make a permanent bureau of the temporary National Resources Council headed by the President's uncle, Frederic A. Delano.

Britain to Avoid Junking Three Battle Cruisers

Remodeling to Bring Them Within Pact Limits; Talks With Soviet Begun.

By the Associated Press.

London, May 20.—Great Britain will save three Class A cruisers from being scrapped under limitations of the London Naval Treaty, it was disclosed today as the government began negotiations with Soviet Russia for a sea treay.

The Anglo-Russian conversations are aimed at obtaining Russian adherence to provisions of the recent London Treaty, signed by Britain, the United States and France.

While these talks opened at the foreign office, Lord Stanley, financial secretary of the admiralty, told the House of Commons the government would rebuild and reduce armaments on three Class A cruisers to prevent them from being scrapped under the 1930 London Treaty.

Britain already has asked the United States and Japan to lift limitations in the treaty on destroyers so she may save some 30 destroyers from being junked.

The ships will be modernized and the reduced armaments will place them in a lower category, avoiding the scrap heap under the treaty, which expires at the end of the year.

Anglo-Soviet conversations, it is expected, will be continued at intervals probably for two or three weeks with the eventual goal a two-party agreement.

The British admiralty is speedily embarking upon naval strengthening and has already taken an unusual step by placing orders for nine destroyers only three weeks after Parliament approved the appropriations.

Construction of new battleships, cruisers and submarines, however, must wait until 1937 because of treaty limitations.

Boy, 6, Injured When Hit by Car

Walter Stewart, 6-year-old son of Chauncey Stewart, a clerk in the Washington city postoffice, was struck and critically injured yesterday afternoon by an automobile at Melrose avenue and Old Georgetown road.

He was taken to Georgetown Hospital by the Bethesda, Md., rescue squad. Physicians said he had a fractured leg and a possible fracture of the skull. He was unconscious, and his condition was said to be critical.

Montgomery County police arrested Davis E. Rozzelle, 20, of Alta Vista, Md., as the driver of the car. He later was under a $500 bond on a technical charge of reckless driving.

Witnesses said, according to police, that the child ran from the curb and that the machine appeared to be traveling at a high rate of speed. The driver of the car, they said, however, stopped quickly after striking the boy.

Belgian Monarch Visits London, Mission Secret

London, May 20 (AP).—King Leopold of the Belgians, traveling incognito, arrived at Lympne Airdrome today on an unheralded visit.

The monarch came in a Belgian air force plane, accompanied by an aide-de-camp. Elaborate precautions were taken at the airport to keep his destination a secret. The King and his aid immediately drove off in a waiting automobile. It was understood he went to stay at a hotel in Sandwich.

On two recent visits here, it was recalled, authoritative sources denied his mission was one of mediation in the Anglo-Italian tension. Leopold's sister, Queen Marie Jose, is the wife of Crown Prince Umberto of Italy.

Woman Flier Sets Altitude Record

Miss Helen Richey, of McKeesport, Pa., topped all existing altitude records for single-seated planes weighing less than 440 pounds on a flight from Washington to New Market, Va., May 2, the National Aeronautic Association said yesterday.

Calibration of he barograph carried by her on the flight showed she had attained an altitude of 18,448 feet. To be credited with an international record, however, a flier with this type of plane must exceed existing record by 656 feet or more.

The present record of 17,037 feet is held by G. Fauvel, of France. Ben King, District pilot, recently was reported to have reached 17,940 feet. This mark has not been checked finally. If it stands, he will hold the international record.

Miss Richey failed to top King's mark by 148 of the required 656 feet. However, she will hold the feminine international record in this category.

Railroad Strike Due Saturday on Coast

San Francisco, May 20 (AP).—A strike of union employes of the Western Pacific, Sacramento Northern and Tidewater Southern railroads has been set for 6 p. m. Saturday, it was learned from a reliable source today.

The strike may be headed off, however, by last minute negotiations between the railroad men, employers and the Federal mediator, J. W. Walsh.

Riverman's Catch Probably a Bomb

What is presumably an antiquated depth bomb, believed to have been planted in the Potomac River almost 40 years ago, reposed yesterday on a wharf near Harbor Precinct police station while Navy experts tried to trace its lineage.

Thinking it was a harmless mooring buoy, Capt. Philip Barbour discovered the massive floating object about two miles below Fort Washington. That was several weeks ago when Capt. Barbour, master of the excursion steamer Potomac, was cruising in a tugboat.

Inspection by waterfront habitues, Navy men and himself has convinced Capt. Barbour it is a mine or depth bomb, whose obsolete design indicates it was set out during the Spanish War. The device has not been definitely catalogued, however, and harbor police are awaiting a verdict by the Navy which will decide whether the bulky iron sphere is dangerous and should be destroyed or harmless and available for use as a pier decoration.

Hauptmann Issue Fails to Defeat Governor; Borah Trails Far Behind.

By the Associated Press.

Newark, N. J., May 20.—Gov. Harold G. Hoffman, whose right to represent the Republican Party at the national convention was challenged because of his intervention in the hectic last days of the Hauptmann-Lindbergh case, tonight finished last among the party's four elected delegates at large as Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas won a sweeping victory in the Presidential preference contest.

More than 170,000 persons voted for Hoffman's foe, Franklin W. Fort, who sought election solely on the issue that it would be "a rebuke" to the Governor for "dragging Jersey justice in the mire" in the Hauptmann case.

Although he led Fort by approximately 45,000 votes, the Governor trailed the slate's high man, Walter E. Edge, former Ambassador to France, by more than 37,000 votes, and National Committeewoman Edna B. Conklin, by 7,000 votes.

4-to-1 Victory.

Tabulation of yesterday's balloting also showed:

Gov. Landon's 4-to-1 victory over Senator William E. Borah in the Presidential preference, which is not binding, and election of Landon-pledged at large and district delegates which assures the Kansan of at least 28 of the State's 32 votes at the Cleveland convention next month. The other four delegates were unpledged and ran without designation. Edge said he believed these four would accept the "decisive" Landon verdict and "vote accordingly," which would mean a solid delegation for the Kansan.

The election in every district of the Democratic organization district delegates' slates pledged to President Roosevelt's renomination.

Polling of more than 30,000 votes by Col. Henry Breckinridge, New Deal foe and sole entrant in the Democratic preference column. President Roosevelt received a large "write-in" vote, not tabulated generally, but in some districts exceeding the crosses marked for Breckinridge.

Renomination of United States Senator W. Warren Barbour by the Republicans and the Democrats' designation of State Senator William H. Smathers, of Atlantic City, as his opponent.

"Bullet" voting — balloting for only one delegate at large to the exclusion of his running mates—was heavily in Hoffman's favor in some counties, particularly stanchly Democratic Hudson, where it was charged he made a "deal" with the Democrats. In other sections the Governor ran so far behind his teammates that it was evident he was being "cut" by the voters.

Edge's performance in getting the highest Republican delegate-at-large vote led political observers to express the opinion he would return to power as a key figure in State party councils. The one-time United States Senator has been in political eclipse in the State since Hoffman went into power two years ago.

The preferential balloting in 2,915 districts gave Landon 252,855, Borah 65,546 and Breckinridge 29,900.

Gov. Hoffman's showing surprised political observers. He waged a vigorous campaign, and his formidable personal organization was out not only to win for him, but also to have him finish in first place. The Governor had no hesitation in snatching up Fort's challenge on the Hauptmann case issue and defending without excuse his actions and investigations in the celebrated sequel to Hauptmann's conviction of the Lindbergh baby kidnap-murder.

Farley Assails Gov. Landon

most probable candidate of the minority party?

"True, he is being exalted by the anti-administration press. If we accept this version, we have been entertaining in obscurity a genius in government; another Lincoln, with dashes of Coolidge in his composition. I think all of us who have any familiarity with politics are cognizant of the process of building up the commonplace into the remarkable. This gentleman may be all his boosters present him as being, but he is nearly 50 years old, and it would be something new if he possessed all the magnificent qualities of administration, all the knowledge of public questions, all the noble attributes with which his champions endow him, without his fame getting beyond the borders of his own State. I believe he made a moderate fortune in the oil business, though his biographers say he was educated as a lawyer, but success in oil is not generally regarded as particularly fitting a man for the Presidency.

"I am not, of course, in possession of exact knowledge of why the Republican Party chooses to put him on a pedestal, but if I were permitted to guess, I would be inclined to believe it was because he was elected Governor of a typical prairie State, that has usually been Republican, and that the duPont Liberty League crowd is less afraid of him than it is of more widely known and more experienced statesmen who have been mentioned in connection with the Republican nomination.

Mentions Kansas.

"It is assuming that he is to be the candidate against Mr. Roosevelt that impels me to smile at the thought of Michigan as a doubtful State. I do not think that even Kansas is a doubtful State if the competition is to be as I have surmised."

Farley also criticized the Republican Party generally, saying:

"You are being asked to believe—in this Progressive section of the country, at least—that the Republican Party is purging itself of the old predatory spirit and that it means hereafter under new leaders to go forward in the path of advancement and care for the plain people.

"Do you believe that fairy story?

"You know how the Republican Party is being financed during the present campaign. Does it seem likely to you—a hard-headed practical people—that the duPont Liberty League, that collection of multimillionaires, and their satellite lawyers and paid propagandists, is going to back any program that would run counter to their own interests, habits and special privileges?"

Couzens Indorsed.

The convention solved its problem of indorsements for the party's senatorial nomination by approving Senator James Couzens (Republican), whose term expires this year, and five Democrats for the post on the ticket. The Democrats indorsed were Representative Prentiss M. Brown (Republican), Michigan, of St. Ignace; Frank A. Picard, of Saginaw, who was defeated by Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg in 1934; John H. Muyskens, a member of the University of Michigan faculty; former Gov. William A. Comstock, and Ray D. Schneider, of Detroit, who sought the senatorial nomination two years ago. The indorsements were given by adoption of a blanket motion.

Former Gov. Wilber M. Brucker, outspoken critic of Couzens, is a canidate for the Republican senatorial nomination.

The convention also indorsed for the Governorship nomination George W. Welsh, former Republican lieutenant Governor, who announced himself as a Democrat recently; Frank Murphy, former Detroit mayor and now United States commissioner to the Philippines; George A. Schroeder, speaker of the House of Representatives, and State Treasurer Theodore I. Fry.

Warns of Class War.

An assertion that labor may be forced to "seek economic justice through political action" unless it is voluntarily accorded the right to organization and collective bargaining was made last night by George M. Harrison, railway labor leader.

Harrison, president of the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, Freight Handlers, Express and Station Employes, spoke in a radio address under the auspices of the Good Neighbor League.

"To force labor to seek economic justice through political action would be to bring about a class struggle for the control of Government," he said.

"It is in the permanent interest of every independent American business man who desires to avoid political control of private enterprise to find a method whereby the conflicts of interest between employer and employee can be determined on the basis of voluntary contract and need not be controlled by direct political action."

Alabama G. O. P. Elects.

Birmingham, May 20 (AP).—Alabama Republicans named four uninstructed delegates at large today to the Cleveland national convention.

T. J. Kennamer, of Birmingham, was selected as the new Republican national committeeman, succeeding O. D. Street, of Birmingham, retiring after holding the post 20 years.

The State-at-large delegates were Street, Kennamer, State Committee Chairman J. C. Swann and J. T. Johnson, of Oneonta.

S. C. Votes to Roosevelt.

Columbia, S. C., May 2 (U.P.).—The South Carolina Democratic convention tonight pledged the State's 16 national convention votes to President Roosevelt amid a clamor of support for the New Deal.

Mrs. Simpson Sane; Will Fight For 4 Children

Mrs. Lydia P. Simpson, wife of George Gaylord Simpson, curator of the New York Museum of Natural History, was found sane yesterday by a jury at Santa Ana, Calif., it was reported by the Associated Press.

Mrs. Simpson immediately announced that she would renew her fight for custody of her four children, who, she said, were taken from her several years ago in New York.

Three of the chidren, Helen, 13; John, 8, and Betty, 6, are in this city in custody of their paternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Simpson, of 1869 Newton street northwest. The fourth, Patricia, 9, legally in the custody of her maternal grandmother, Mrs. Mary Pedroja, was with Mrs. Simpson at Santa Ana.

The battle for custody of the girls began in New York about four years ago, when Mrs. Simpson charged they had been kidnaped. Later Dr. Simpson obtained their custody in an out-of-court agreement. They came here to their grandparents.

When the children were removed to Chicago, their mother besieged Leo A. Rover, then United States attorney here, and Chief of Police Pelham D. Glassford with demands that they aid her in the case.

Zioncheck

the sun streamed through onto the kitchen sink, nearly sunk under the weight of unwashed silverware, egg shells, empty beer cans and empty bottles.

Said Mrs. Young, "My silver will be ruined, left three weeks in that water."

From the sun porch, she gingerly removed a gallon can labeled "pickled cucumbers" and led the way to the bedroom.

"I don't know what has happened to my fine bedstead," Mrs. Young said, "but it seems to be gone."

"Where is the counterpane," asked an apartment house agent.

"It's in the dining room," she sighed, "under the table. It's being used as a rug."

Part of the exhibit was of Zioncheck's toys, the Representative evidently having been a prolific player. They were on the sun porch.

On a table was his Indian suit, composed of a feathered headdress, part of a ping pong set, a pair of rattles and a toy dog—mute evidence of the boy in the man.

The top of this table was marked by circular rings, which one observer sagely declared must have been made by the bottoms of tumblers.

In a corner were two bows and no arrows, equipment for the Indian suit. In a waste basket was a life-size toy rabbit, its neck broken.

"Did this belong to Zioncheck?"

"Oh, yes," said Mrs. Young, "all the animals; I had no zoo."

The showing closed with a setting for "Breakfast for Two," perhaps a vestige of Zioncheck's hurried departure on his honeymoon.

This was on a coffee table in the living room.

Plates were laid for two; there were two cups and saucers, a coffee pot and silverware—just as the great man had left—coffee mildewed in the pot and all the dishes dirty.

Mrs. Young explained she leased the apartment to Zioncheck until October.

"Under the circumstances," she said, I feel I have a right to move him out. This is my home, the only one I have for my son and myself."

The Representative and his bride are en route to the United States from the Virgin Islands.

Before leaving St. Thomas, the United Press reported, he announced that he would run for re-election.

"There are five men against me," he said, as he sampled some rum at a distillery "but they haven't got a chance. The people want Zioncheck."

His chief interest before the boat sailed was getting enough rum so he would have some to take to all his friends here. Some he bought and some was given to him.

Court Upholds Two-Cent Rise In Milk Prices

Fairfax Decision in Favor of Fixing Cost Affects 3,000 Consumers.

Three thousand milk consumers in Arlington and Fairfax counties are facing a 2 cents per quart increase as the result of a court decision yesterday dissolving the injunction restraining the Virginia milk commission from enforcing price-fixing regulations in the State.

Judge Walter T. McCarthy handed down the decision at the opening of the May term of Fairfax Circuit Court. Hazel's Dairy, of Falls Church, which obtained a temporary injunction March 31, had sought to have the order made permanent.

Vested with authority to fix wholesale and retail prices of milk, the State commission set 13 cents a quart as the minimum. Thomas L. and Richard E. Hazel, operators of the dairy, contended they have been charging 11 cents for the last five years and are opposed to raising the price.

Washington dairies, which supply approximately half the consumers of Arlington and Fairfax counties, sell their milk at 13 cents.

After day-long arguments by representatives of the milk commission and Lawrence W. Douglas, Commonwealth's attorney of Arlington County and counsel for Hazel Bros., Judge McCarthy ruled that there is no question that the State can regulate milk prices, hence the commission's acts are legal and constitutional.

The Hazel Dairy had argued such regulatory activities are arbitrary and unreasonable.

Douglas declared the fight probably will be carried to the State Court of Appeals, which meets in Wytheville June 2.

Meanwhile, the Hazel Dairy must comply with the 13-cent minimum.

Toronto, May 20 (AP).—Frederick Osborne, of Toronto, testified before Special Examiner Thomas T. Rolph today that he was approached by a man offering $20,000 for participation in a plot to murder Ambrose J. Small, wealthy Toronto theater owner, whose disappearance in 1919 still remains a mystery.

Army Engineer Seeks $160,000 For River Jobs

Principal Request Covers Funds for Maintaining Harbor Needs.

Allotments totalling $160,000 for three Potomac River projects in or near Washington are included in recommendations forwarded by the Office of the Chief of Engineers yesterday to the Secretary of War.

Its action prompted by the War Department appropriation act of May 15, 1936, the engineer's office is seeking a total of $103,456,839.70 for new work on rivers and harbors throughout the United States, and $34,408,150 for maintenance projects.

The three projects are for maintenance work exclusively. The engineer's office has asked $95,000 "to meet the minimum navigation needs" in Washington harbor. This appropriation would be for dredging and other operations necessary to keep the Potomac channel, within the District boundaries, in its present navigable condition.

Another $40,000 is sought to maintain the channel in the Potomac River below Washington. The third project, for which $25,000 is asked, is for examinations, surveys and contingencies within the District. Such surveys would cover any investigations authorized during the year by Congress.

Allotments recommended to the Secretary of War were for projects in every section of the United States, and in its possessions. Among the "new work" projects were Cape Cod canal, Massachusetts, $3,000,000; New York Harbor, $1,126,000; Great Lakes to Hudson River waterway, $5,000,000; inland waterway from Delaware River to Chesapeake Bay, $4,000,000; Mississippi River, from the Missouri River to Minneapolis, Minn., $23,900,000, and Missouri River at Fort Peck, $21,000,000.

Oxford Group's Founder Heads Visiting 'Team'

Nothing New About Beliefs of His Movement, Buchman Says.

Thirty-three leaders of a religious movement without membership, dues or any estimate of its strength except that it is represented in 52 countries of the world, arrived in Washington yesterday.

Dr. Frank Buchman, founder and leader of the Oxford Group Movement, headed his team, as each participating unit is called, which is composed of men and women from five foreign countries. They stopped in Washington for conferences prior to the opening of a national assembly of the Oxford Group in Stockbridge, Mass., from May 29 to June 8.

The leaders, including titled personages from abroad, labor leaders, society women, unemployed and employers of large numbers, will address a meeting tonight telling of the aims of the group to cure the social, economic and individual needs of nations and citizens.

"Nothing New About It."

"The idea of the Oxford Group Movement is to show people how to live truly Christian lives. Those whose lives we have 'changed,' as we call it, have found the solution to their individual problems whether they were unemployed, unhappy at home, or anything else," Dr. Buchman said.

Dr. Buchman and his followers, some of whom are of independent means, serve without salaries and depend on voluntary offerings from supporters for their existence. They are at the Mayflower Hotel and were entertained yesterday at a reception and tea given by Mr. and Mrs. Harry Wallace Blair, of this city. A public meeting will be held tonight at the Mayflower Hotel.

Buchman Is Founder.

Dr. Buchman, an American who at one time was in charge of the religious work at Pennsylvania State College and later received an honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity at Muhlenberg College, Pa., started the movement, but it derived its name from one of the early units he founded at Oxford University in England.

Among the distinguished members of the team now in Washington are Lord Addington, a member of the British House of Lords; Sir Phillip Dundas, of Scotland, a former officer in the famous Black Watch; Col. A. W. Angus, who played on the All-Scotland Rugby team for 11 years; Gen. C. T. Caulfield, retired from the English army, and his son, John; Valdemar Hvidt, advocate of the Supreme Court of Denmark; Dr. J. E. W. Duys, parliamentary whip of the Socialist Party of The Netherlands; Baroness de Watteville-Berchheim, of Paris; Jan Van Walre, secretary of the finance section of the League of Nations, Geneva; W. Farrar Vickers, managing director of Vickers Oils, Ltd., Leeds, England; Sidney Clarke, a member of the London Stock Exchange; George Light, member of the British Labor Party.

France to Seek Firmer British Sanctions Stand

Blum, Expected to Be New Premier, Wants League Action in June.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, May 20.—France, informed persons said tonight, will ask Great Britain to take a definite stand in the Italo-Ethiopian situation, in order to prevent further postponement of action at the meeting of the League of Nations Council June 16.

Leon Blum, generally expected to be France's next premier when the Socialist regime takes office June 1, was understood to have asked Premier Albert Sarraut and Joseph Paul-Boncour, minister of state, to tell Great Britain that the new French government will be determined to settle the sanctions question.

The three, with Alexis Leger, permanent secretary of the French foreign office, discussed France's problems at a long session in Blum's apartment.

Informed sources reported Blum declared he saw necessity of clarifying Italy's position in Europe as soon as possible and outlined a program under which France and Britain, after determining their own stand, would talk to Premier Mussolini of Italy in the hope of reaching an agreement before June 16.

After the conference, at which the Locarno Treaty and other European questions were considered, Paul-Boncour telephoned a resume of the conversation to Foreign Minister Pierre-Etienne Flandin, now on a vacation in southern France.

Informed sources reported Blum sought Sarraut's support in attempting to induce Edouard Herriot, former premier, whose government was overthrown during a war-debt controversy, to accept the foreign post in the new cabinet.

Italy to Ease Tension.

Premier Mussolini was reported by Fernand Debrinon, editorial writer of the newspaper L'Information, today to have instructed his ambassador to London to tell Great Britain Italy is ready to take the first step to ease Anglo-Italian tension by the recall of troops from Libya.

(Authoritative British quarters denied in London that Dino Grandi, the Italian ambassador, had approached the government with a proposal involving withdrawal of troops from Libya.)

Britain to Await Blum.

London, May 20 (AP).—The British government, it was reliably stated tonight, has decided to await the advent of the Socialist French government under Leon Blum before taking the important decisions on foreign policy which must be faced soon.

Cabinet Backs Law Splitting Austrian Rule

Measure Would Provide 3 'Fuehrers;' Starhemberg Confers in Secret.

Vienna, May 20.—The cabinet tonight gave final form to a law under which Austria would have three "Fuehrers" or national leaders.

Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg, unofficial dictator, would become national leader of the Fatherland Front, and Vice Chancellor Eduard Baar von Baarenfels national commander of the front militia.

Prince Ernst von Starhemberg, ousted as co-dictator in a bloodless coup d'etat last week, would continue as national sports leader and also head the Motherhood Protective Association.

All would have the title of Fuehrer, but Schuschnigg would remain the actual supreme head of the government.

The law represents a compromise in the division of authority.

Meanwhile, Starhemberg called an extraordinary session of Heimwehr commanders to discuss "future action" in connection with Chancellor Schuschnigg's order that the Heimwehr be disarmed.

Talks With Fascist Heads.

Behind the heavily guarded doors of his private headquarters, the fallen prince, who was momentarily expected to make a new bid for power, conversed lengthily with his Fascist chiefs, presumably bringing them a message from Premier Benito Mussolini, with whom Starhemberg conferred in Rome.

The Heimwehr leader returned from Rome by airplane this afternoon. He was at the controls of the tri-motored Italian plane, carrying eight passengers.

Hundreds of Heimwehr men and admirers were at the airport to greet him. The ovation was mingled with cat-calls and boos for the government.

Starhemberg left the airport immediately for his headquarters.

Close friends and ranking members of the Heimwehr, Starhemberg's private army, said the prince has decided to oppose disarming of the organization in opposition to Schuschnigg.

May Mean Civil War.

The result may be civil war or the downfall of Schuschnigg, who Friday proclaimed himself absolute dictator. If Schuschnigg enforces his order, the Heimwehr is expected to resist by force of arms. If he rescinds it, his prestige will have been impaired too greatly to allow him to continue as dictator.

Meanwhile, Schuschnigg received the diplomatic corps for the first time in the capacity of foreign minister as well as chancellor.

Later he presided over a cabinet meeting in which reconstruction of the Fatherland front, formerly commanded by Starhemberg, was the main topic. The cabinet also discussed creation of a Fatherland front militia and provisions for unemployment of former members of the disbanded Schutz corps and auxiliary police units.

The Only Way Out.

Testifying before the Senate Appropriations Committee, George U. Harvey, president of the Borough of Queens, New York City, has added to the impressive weight of evidence showing that waste and political debauchery flourish under the WPA.

Mr. Harvey's story is fast becoming familiar in its general outline, although the details are an astounding record of maladministration on a huge scale. He states, for example, that over 2,000 administrative employes have been engaged to handle 15,000 families on relief, as contrasted with the 275 persons who were employed when the local organization was taking care of 11,000 families. Not only is there an excessive number of supervisors but they have become more numerous as the relief rolls have declined in recent months. Last, but not least, it is alleged that private contractors have been put out of business because of the superior attraction of relief jobs.

In the light of such testimony, which finds corroboration from many sources, it seems incredible that members of the Appropriations Committee will be so indifferent to their legislative responsibility as to approve the proposal to put another $1,425,000,000 at the disposal of Mr. Hopkins to be squandered like the billions that have gone before. The evidence is not only an indictment of the individuals who have made political use of funds intended for the unemployed, but also an indictment of the wasteful and futile system of administering relief under the WPA. The waste that might be avoided under more careful and conscientious supervision greatly augments the burden of caring for the unemployed, which would be heavy in any circumstances.

A mere earmarking of relief funds by Congress might reduce the amount of wasteful expenditure, but it could not reform an inherently defective system. The only remedy for the evils of which Mr. Harvey and others complain lies in turning the administration of relief back to the local communities and insisting that local governments make an adequate contribution to relief needs.

Gold For Chinese Silver.

The agreement made by the Treasury Department for the exchange of American gold for Chinese silver represents a paradoxical application of the Pittman Silver Act. In spite of the President's reckless statement that "the silver act heretofore has relieved China in one of its great economic emergencies," every economist knows that this measure was largely responsible for the collapse of China's silver standard. Oddly enough, it is now to be used to bolster up China's new managed currency. What this Nation took from China with one hand it is now to return with the other.

Hitherto the only beneficiaries of the silver act have been a small group of silver producers in this and other countries and a band of speculators and smugglers abroad. Neither the American people generally nor those 700 millions in China and India who, by means of a sharp rise in the price of the white metal, were to be given increased purchasing power were to any degree aided by that measure.

On the contrary, the Treasury's purchases of silver, by boosting the price of the metal to artificially high levels, brought on a serious economic and financial crisis in China which reduced its trade with this country. It was only last November when the Nanking government demonetized silver and adopted a managed money system that the crisis was surmounted.

The Pittman act specified that the Treasury was to purchase silver until our stocks amounted in value to a third of the gold reserve or the price of silver reached $1.29 an ounce.

Neither goal has thus far been achieved. Large quantities of silver have been added to our stores. But the great influx of gold from abroad has kept the ratio of silver to gold in the monetary reserve far below that specified in the Pittman act. At the same time the price of silver, which at one time reached 81 cents an ounce, is now hovering around 45 cents. Under these circumstances the Treasury has no alternative but to continue its purchases.

It is not believed that any large sums will be spent by the United States in the purchase of silver from China, hitherto not a seller but a buyer of the metal. And in so far as such purchases will be made, the effect may be salutary. For the gold and dollar exchange which China will receive for its silver will provide an additional backing for its currency and thus make possible the stabilization of Chinese exchange. To that extent it will contribute to the improvement of Chinese-American trade.

In contrast with the attitude taken by the Administration at the London economic conference of 1933 the United States today favors stabilization of exchanges. In a small way the agreement made by the Treasury this week represents a step in that direction.

Time to Face Realities.

The Administration is obviously bewildered by the terrific blows that have been rained upon its program this week by the courts. Aside from the invalidation of the Guffey act, there are indications that numerous work-relief projects may be halted through injunctions, as the Resettlement Administration's model community in New Jersey has been. With Congress approaching adjournment, the situation is little short of chaotic.

An astonishing number of severe reverses in the courts have been required to prove to the Administration that it can make no headway toward recovery by ignoring constitutional limitations. But there should no longer be any question about it. The court appears to have set up a barrier to all sweeping Federal regulatory legislation that is not confined to the field of interstate commerce. Certainly it has demolished the popular but unacceptable belief that the general welfare clause is a grant of authority extending beyond the enumerated powers of Congress. Speaking for the majority on this point, Justice Sutherland flatly declared that "no authority exists" through which Congress may legislate substantively for the general welfare, "save as the general welfare may be promoted by the exercise of the powers which are granted."

If this obiter dictum seems to rise from a narrow conception of the Constitution, it may indicate that the Court has been driven to the use of positive and forceful language to emphasize its unwillingness to see the American system of government undermined. The Administration has forced through Congress a large number of measures that were known to be of doubtful constitutionality. Apparently it believed that the Supreme Court would not have the courage to nullify the so-called recovery laws, even though Congress exceeded its powers in enacting them.

The assumption that the Court could be hoodwinked is one of the most serious blunders that the Administration has made. For the Court has not only thrown out every unconstitutional measure submitted to it, but its tendency seems to have turned in the direction of conservatism instead of greater flexibility of interpretation. There is no longer the slightest doubt that Congress must restrict its acts to matters over which it has legal jurisdiction, or see its programs repeatedly shattered by judicial decisions.

Too much emphasis should not be placed, however, upon the seemingly conservative trend in the Court's opinions. The Court has emphasized the limited nature of the Federal Government's authority because of the flagrant abuses of that authority by which it has been confronted. No doubt the Court will continue to place a liberal interpretation upon those powers which Congress actually possesses.

Since it is certain to be a vital factor in determining the future of the American governmental system, it is of the utmost importance that the public understand the attitude the Court has taken. In the Guffey case, and similar cases which have involved New Deal legislation, the chief question at issue was one of governmental powers. To the casual observer the Court has vetoed an act of Congress. But a more searching analysis indicates that its real concern was to uphold the American system of government.

Some critics complain that the constitutional restrictions thus placed upon Congress are too narrow; that serious maladjustments in industry make the exercise of national power desirable, and that under present setup there is a twilight zone in which neither the States nor the Nation may function effectively. These conditions, says Justice Cardozo, lead to anarchy. If all these statements are granted, they are nevertheless beside the point which confronted the Court. Its job is to see that the Constitution is enforced as it now stands, regardless of what Mr. Roosevelt, or anyone else, believes that document should contain.

> If the people desire to give Congress the power to regulate industries within the States, and the regulation of employers and employes in those industries, they are at liberty to declare their will in the appropriate manner, but it is not for the Court to amend the Constitution by judicial decision.

Any other attitude on the part of the Court would be indefensible, for it would open the way to revolutionary changes in our system of government without the consent of the people. Apparently the effectuation of such changes has been one outstanding objective of the Administration. The American people may count themselves fortunate indeed that this reckless grasping for power by illegal means has been blocked. If the President is true to his guiding principle—to retreat when a mistake has become obvious—the orgy of unconstitutional lawmaking will be carried no further.

Some of the President's objectives could doubtless be achieved by constitutional means. If he finds these approaches to recovery too restricted, he will have no honorable course save to sponsor a constitutional amendment.

Peace In The Americas.

A draft agenda for the Pan American peace conference to be held late this year at Buenos Aires has been drawn up by the governing board of the Pan American Union on the basis of suggestions made by the 21 nations that are to take part in the meeting.

It is an ambitious and comprehensive document. If acted upon, even in part, the conference will mark a great step forward in the direction of tightening the bonds uniting the nations of this hemisphere in a great fellowship of peace.

The proposed agenda consists of six parts dealing respectively with organization of peace, neutrality, limitation of armaments, juridical problems, economic problems and intellectual co-operation. Some of these, like the proposals to promote closer intellectual and cultural relations between the American republics and foster increased trade and travel between them, can be dealt with incidentally to the main purpose of the conference. That purpose is the organization of peace in the Americas on a solid and permanent basis.

The suggestions advanced for the achievement of that great aim vary widely in their nature, although united by a similarity of purpose. Some nations have proposed the re-examination of all existing peace pacts and agencies with a view to co-ordinating them in one well-knit whole. Others have suggested the creation of something like an American League of Nations; still others the establishment of an inter-American court of justice. Every one of these proposals is worth examining with the utmost care.

It is a significant and heartening fact that at a time when in so many parts of the world discord and confusion appear to be the order of the day the trend in this hemisphere is toward greater harmony and co-operation. The very fact that the nations in their replies to President Roosevelt's invitation have not hesitated to make far-reaching proposals shows how eagerly they are looking forward to the Buenos Aires meeting to banish war in this hemisphere.

Governor Lehman Retires.

The announcement by Gov. Herbert H. Lehman of New York of his intention not to be a candidate for re-election next fall comes as a complete surprise.

There have been rumors, from time to time, that he was anxious to be relieved of the increasing responsibilities of his office after having given signal service to his State, first as Lieutenant Governor, and during the last four years as Governor. But in view of the very intimate relations existing between the Governor and the President and the latter's desire to have his friend and ally on the same ticket with himself in New York State next fall, it was taken for granted that the pressure from the White House would prevail against the personal desires of the Governor. His refusal to run, therefore, must be regarded as a blow to President Roosevelt and may weaken the latter's chances of carrying the Empire State next November.

Whatever the occasion for Gov. Lehman's decision may be, there can be no doubt that he has conducted himself in his important office in a manner worthy of praise. Both parties can stand more of men of his type.

Closing The Death Trap.

In spite of long delays, the awarding of a contract for the construction of an overpass above the Rockville crossing, where 14 students of the Williamsport high school were killed more than a year ago, is welcome news. There is something deeply ironic about delaying improvements of this sort because they do not happen to be located in an area where unemployment is prevalent. Fortunately wiser counsel has prevailed, and the project will be completed on its own merits.

Funds have also been provided for the elimination of the dangerous crossing at Kensington. In both cases it is to be hoped that the work will be promptly undertaken so that the risk of other avoidable tragedies may be minimized.

If all the work-relief funds were devoted to constructive projects of this type the public would at least obtain tangible benefits from the enormous sums that are being spent to create jobs.

"It would take every person on earth, counting at the rate of three per second, 10,000 years to count the molecules in a drop of water," asserts a scientist. It looks as if this is another project that will have to be abandoned.

Any chronic sucker constitutes proof that if you have too much faith and hope, you'll become an object of charity.

Playgrounds For Everyone.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Board of Education is the only agency concerned with the recreational program for the District of Columbia which is governed by representative citizens of the District. And it is to be hoped that in the board's discussion of this program the citizens of Washington will be given sufficient time in which to express their views in the matter. The general tendency is to accept any program that offers improvement over existing conditions.

The composition of this District of Columbia Recreation Committee is more bureaucratic than representative, as only one member, Henry I. Quinn, is responsible to a body of local citizens, whose appointment is amenable to public sentiment. The body governing our recreational program should be composed of a body of citizens responsive if not responsible to the citizens of this city.

There are two phases of co-ordination necessary in this recreational problem—one is technical and the other is legislative. It should not be necessary for someone else higher up to bump the technicians' heads together that they might co-ordinate their activities in supervised recreation. But our unbalanced program, in which one agency spends millions and another has to exist on a starvation ration, is the result of no co-ordination, no central governing body for recreation, composed of representative citizens of the District of Columbia, who would allot the moneys so that all sections of this city would have a proportional share.

The existing facilities are distributed very unfairly. The communities having the greatest wealth and culture have a far greater proportion of land for recreation and the necessary equipment. The areas of our city where disease and delinquency are rampant have little if any provisions for recreation. Our school board does a good job in distributing educational facilities to all classes because all classes are represented in its make-up.

Conditions In Mexico.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Loud are the voices warning of threats to liberty in the United States. But the set refusal of our Government to cease its "good neighbor" support of the Mexican laws denying civil and religious liberty causes only sporadic group resentment among our "patriots."

Responsible editors and observers, writing in both religious and secular periodicals of our own country, emphatically challenge the evidently concocted report that the inhuman laws have been relaxed. These writers contend that the "opening" of a few scattered church buildings, while, as in Durango, only eight priests are allowed to serve 500,000 persons, appears to be but a political stratagem intended to aid the Administration at Washington in the coming campaign.

Whatever may be the precise "inside" facts, there can be little doubt that the people of the United States know well where to place the blame for whatever further subversiveness grows out of Ambassador Daniel's back-slapping of the Communists below the Rio Grande.

The smart boys in Washington seem to imagine that because liberty-loving citizens do not continually "gang-up," and raise a continuous din, nothing is happening. When and if their vision clears they probably will strip their gears going into reverse.

A Board Of Recreation?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The discussion now in progress in the press relative to the revamping our small parks by the National Capital Parks office with their $2,500,000 shows what always happens when one is spending somebody else's money.

The trouble is that the citizens who use these parks and eventually pay the bills have no representation on the governing body that allocates the lump sum fund to the individual projects. The citizens know their needs best and can best decide where the money can be used to best effect. It is natural that citizens who have been fighting for years for a recreational center in their neighborhood should look with envious eyes on the $2,500,000 park fund and criticize such lavish expenditures on small parks in the center of the city—the show places.

This is the old problem of bureaucracy versus representative government. We recognize the abilities of these gentlemen, but the management of our parks and recreational system lacks local color. We need a local board of recreation, composed of representative local citizens.

Mrs. Roosevelt's Tea Party.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The unprecedented if not sensational act of the First Lady in giving the inmates of a local institution a genuine "break" in the way of a lawn party at the White House, may serve to call attention to what would not otherwise get the attention it deserves.

I had just received from one of the best-equipped and conducted of all these industrial schools in the country—the one at Hudson, N. Y.—a plea for some serious consideration of the entire problem involved in this sort of institution.

The letter reads: "Why does not some one suggest a survey of the training schools for boys and girls in every State, since every State has some? They are all more or less (usually more) penal institutions, though they ought to be under the school systems with a teacher staff instead of the usual 'protect-society-from-them.' Perhaps you could borrow some of us who have had years of experience in such work, that as a result of our survey we might induce States to work on a different basis—a medical, educational, re-educational outlook, instead of mere retribution. We want rehabilitation, not bitterness as a result of our work for mere children who have been delinquent, largely because of having no home surroundings to help them to better things."

I, for one, congratulate the First Lady for this brave move, and sincerely hope that not only here, but elsewhere in the land attention may be drawn to our most unchristian and obsolete way of dealing with unfortunate boys and girls.

Incidentally, while the going is good, why not have Mrs. Roosevelt make a visit—maybe a visitation—to the nurses' home of Columbia Hospital and make known to Congress and the city at large what some of our finest nurses of the land must put up with by way of accommodations? J. O. KNOTT.
Washington, May 16.

Trial And Error.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Recently, President Roosevelt repeated his inaugural promise to be the first to acknowledge when an Administration policy failed to show the hoped-for results. Has Mr. Roosevelt kept that promise? And may we place our trust in him?

It took nine months for the NRA to be buried after its legal death. But then an investigating agency of the results of NRA was set up. An attempt to revive the NRA was then made—but business received this project with so chilling an attitude that the matter was hurriedly dropped.

The Tugwellian projects have proved the most costly of the brainstorms of the brain trust but President Roosevelt refuses to drop the projects. Farm prices have increased somewhat, but Mother Nature and not the millions of dollars scattered by Secretary Wallace should receive the credit. In fact, Mother Nature almost caused the President to shoulder the responsibility of a food famine—but the luminaries of the Administration who plan long-range projects could not be expected to foresee a drought or other things that real farmers know about.

The G-Men's Work.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I want to tell you how deeply I appreciate the commendatory statements concerning this bureau's work in The Post of May 9. We all know that approbation of a job well done is further incentive to do the next one better.

Needless to say, the bureau's success during the past few days in apprehending Alvin Karpis, Harry Campbell and William Mahan gave me a great deal of personal satisfaction. I am pleased, however, with your reference to the work of a less spectacular nature which the bureau performs every day. The public's attention is captured by the exciting kidnap cases, but the routine work, which is very important, is often overlooked.

It is my sincere hope that the Federal Bureau of Investigation will continue to merit your confidence. J. EDGAR HOOVER.

Economic Crisis in Germany.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: From the point of view of clearness and understanding, the article in your issue of May 18 by Raymond Leslie Buell on the situation in Germany explained with extraordinary coherence the real nature of the breakdown of German economy.

Caught between the horrors of increasing unemployment and the risk of illimitable inflation, the Nazi rule has maintained itself by an exaggerated program of rearmament and remilitarization. It is obvious that there comes a time when excessive investment, such as the Nazis made in heavy machinery of war, which is certainly the most non-economic of all goods, is productive of nothing but war. The total indebtedness of that country is now somewhere in the neighborhood of 55,000,000,000 marks, and, under such an incubus of debt, the German goverment has had to rearm and remilitarize in order to avert a more progressive decline in employment than is now apparent.

The last dramatic gesture in the rapid development of Hitler's war plan was the recent reoccupation of the Rhineland. How long he will keep up his face is not yet known, but it is too horribly obvious that peace is the most remote of his intentions. For what alternative but war has he?

Normal productive processes have been crippled irreparably and will remain so until the entire rule is terminated. Germany, a country whose economic solvency depends most properly on its foreign trade, has lost since 1932 more than 25 per cent of its export trade with the world. Its exports to the United States alone show a decline of 43 per cent for the three years of Hitler's rule.

This tremendous drop in Germany's business with the rest of the world is largely due to the successful boycott against German goods and services, a boycott organized and directed in the United States by the Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League of which Samuel Untermyer is president. Such an organized boycott movement is powerful in at least 12 other nations throughout the world, particularly in Great Britain, where the organized anti-Nazi movement is almost as strong as it is here. It is admitted even by the Nazis themselves as, for example, Albrecht Forstman, a close collaborator of Rudolph Hess, that the boycott "is mostly an expression of antipathy of the American population to Nazi policy."

It is not necessary to invent stories or to distort the facts to prove that Nazism is a vicious and barbarous form of government. Mr. Buell's unbiased reporting of conditions in Germany carry severe enough indictments.

M. B. ZERWICK, Director of Public Relations, Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League.

The Post Impressionist

Wild West's George W.

Post Office, Thursday.

OUR little column on the decline of the Wild West Show has awakened some curiosity concerning the beginnings of that educational entertainment—and this, of course, means concerning Colonel Cody. Everybody knows the legends of Buffalo Bill and the Pony Express, Buffalo Bill and the Indian Wars; it was only last winter that the Post-Impressionist talked about Buffalo Bill as the heroic movies pictured him. But, though he first caught the eye of the world as a showman, few people know the history of his achievement.

We don't contend that the nucleus was his. Before Cody, Wild Bill Hickok had tried a "buffalo-hunt" as a money-maker. So had Barnum. Indeed, away back in 1860, Phineas T. played with plans which might have led to such a show as Cody subsequently realized.

But, with the real "Wild West, Rocky Mountain and Prairie Exhibition," Buffalo Bill was first in the field—and first in the hearts of his countrymen.

"It will never do, Billy!" So Gen. Sherman told Cody when the latter broached his scheme in 1872.

Nevertheless, ten years later, Cody found a sympathetic supporter in theatrical-producer Nate Salsbury and formed a partnership with Dr. W. F. Carver. The latter had just been touring Europe as a crack-shot and horse trainer.

They got together the whole equipment: Indians and cowboys, wild buffalo and wild ponies and soldiery. There was to be "a real Old Glory blow-out" on the Fourth of July, 1883, at North Platte—and there these showmen first put on their show.

How does the Edward Gibbon of press-agents, Cody's own Maj. Burke, record that event?

"Thus in a still distant and debatable region, a wilderness over which the buffalo still roamed and the hostile savage prowled—under most difficult and dangerous conditions, in furtherance of a purely patriotic purpose—was roughly organized an ephemeral celebration destined to serve as the basic idea for an American revelation."

And how, in Cody's own words, did good Col. Cody take it?

"I tried it on my neighbors," he explained, "and they lived through it and liked it—I made up my mind right then I'd take that show East!"

He did take it East, after an applauding stop at Omaha—all the "attractions" we've already mentioned, plus the battered Deadwood Coach; Maj. Frank North, "Great White Chief of the Pawnees;" Capt. A. H. Bogardus, "world's champion pigeon-shot"—blaring Burke's Pre-Slogan Era slogan: "The Grassy Sward Our Carpet, Heaven's Azure Canopy Our Canvas—No Tinsel, No Gilding, No Humbug!"

And the critics?

"Thunder of hoofs, clank of spurs, rattle of pistols, swish of lariat and crack of rifles, glint of shattered glass, odor of gunpowder, made it authentic and amazing."

That from the conservative Hartford Courant! In the effete East the Wild West Show had been seen and had conquered.

Winifred Johnston, in that essay of hers for the Southwest Review to which we referred the other day, admits that, though no other such show ever had such a headliner, "Cody was always more actor than manager: he detested the details." Carver retired; Salsbury assumed full business control, and to him no little credit is given by Richard J. Walsh in his Cody biography.

"Salsbury," Miss Johnston writes, "was firmly set against any 'circusing.'" And Barnum himself admitted that this entertainment "didn't need spangles."

Mark Twain told Buffalo Bill:

"It is often said, on the other side of the water, that none of the exhibitions which we send to England are (sic) purely and distinctively American. If you will take the Wild West show over there, you can remove that reproach."

So—with Annie Oakley, Johnny Baker, "Old Oxheart" and John Nelson's Ogallala wife and six papooses added—the institution went to Europe in 1887, "when Cody gave four kings and the Prince of Wales a ride in the Deadwood Coach." It went again in 1892, when Cody "gave a command performance at Windsor."

By the end of 1910 there must have been comparatively few boys or girls in the United States—and fewer adults—who had not seen "Buffalo Bill's Wild West": it was as much a national object as the Washington Monument. Yet, in 1913, in the city of Denver, sheriff's officers closed in—and closed up.

Out of the ruin, Cody couldn't get even the few thousand dollars needed to fill the pay roll. The Wild West disappeared under the hammer of an auctioneer.

Why this change in entertainment-taste?

Oh, we're not going into that again!

When Senators yearn for a pill,
Or think it is time for a pellet,
He speeds to their side with a will;
Whatever it is he'll repel it.
He tells them just when to quit tea
And when to give up cream and gravy,
And so it is thought he should be
An admiral (rear) in the Navy!

Whenever a solon feels green,
The medico speeds to him quickly;
He comes in a big limousine
And does what he can for the sickly.
He says to him: "Stick out your tongue!"
And rules he must give up chop suey—
So into the bill there is flung
A clause to proclaim him a Dewey!

When leaders feel heavy and low
And haven't the pep to keep going,
He tells them when pulses are slow
Or fast with a manner all-knowing.
He watches each notable spleen,

For this it is plain to be seen
He ought to be shoved up the ladder!

Or gullets demand some attention,

With title impressively salty!

Take us some place east of Suez
Where the cuts are taken short—
Where experiments are joyful
And there isn't any court.

Take us where there's hasty thinking
And we all can order "Go!"
With a gay and cocky manner—
And have no one bellow "No!"

Where the traffic signs are greenest—
That's the place where we would hop;
Out where no one blows a whistle—
Out where no light flashes "Stop!"

With a backswing such as we have—
With a follow-through so keen,
It's depressing to be stymied
Every time we reach the green.

Studious Pupils Mean Something's on the Air

Atlanta, Ga., May 20 (U.P.).—Intense concentration of Georgia Tech students at lectures made professors suspicious today. They investigated, found students using tiny headphones, a crystal and an inconspicuous wire, to bring their favorite radio programs into class. Then, with the headphones concealed in cupped palms, they gazed with apparent rapt attention at the lecturer.

By Raymond Leslie Buell,
President of the Foreign Policy Association.

AT THE BEGINNING of 1935 Mussolini held the key to the European situation. His army was needed to check Hitler and he believed he could name his own terms. Four years before he had seen Japan seize Manchukuo, and was now witnessing German violation of the armament section of the Versailles Treaty. Had not fascism preached the necessity of expansion and the invincibility of the new Rome?

Underlying these factors of prestige were Italy's fundamental economic needs. Italy is densely populated and poo in mineral resources. Before the war the country had exported millions of men who sent home immigrant remittances. As a result of restriction on immigration by many countries, however, this outlet had been closed.

In 1919 and 1920 the Italian government raised the question of raw materials at various international conferences, but without result.

The Smoot-Hawley tariff, the Ottawa agreements and devaluation of the pound and the dollar dealt Italy heavy blows.

In the fall of 1934 Italy imposed a severe quota system on foreign trade and reluctantly followed the German example of autarchy. But Italy lacked the resources to become self-sufficient. Meanwhile, despite a decline in the birth rate, the population was increasing at a rate of more than 300,000 annually.

Ethiopia's Position Made It Natural Prey.

ETHIOPIA was singled out as the object of Fascist aggression because it was the only area in Africa, with the exception of Liberia, which was not under a European flag and was thought unable to resist foreign occupation.

In 1923, despite British opposition, Ethiopia became a member of the League of Nations with the support of France and Italy.

The pretext needed by Fascist imperialism was found in the famous Ual Ual boundary incident of December, 1934. Ethiopia appealed to the League in January, 1935, but the League Council took no steps to halt Mussolini's troop movements.

In August a commission attempting to conciliate the Ual Ual dispute found itself deadlocked, and as a result a special meeting of the League Council was convened. Pressed by an aroused public opinion, the British government stiffened its attitude. Italy then agreed to the appointment of a fifth arbitrator to the Ual Ual commission. At the same time, the Council declared that in September it would examine the general relations between the two countries.

The good impression created by this belated resolution was impaired when France, Britain and Italy announced that representatives of the powers which had signed the 1906 treaty would meet in Paris to find a "solution" which would make League action unnecessary in September. Thus the old system of power-politics continued to contend with the new League idea. And power-politics won a victory in Paris when Britain and France proposed an arrangement which in effect would have meant the peaceful absorption of Ethiopia by Italy. Mussolini cavalierly rejected this compromise.

Duce Answered British By Torrent of Propaganda.

THE BREAKDOWN of the Paris proposals and the imposition of an informal British embargo on private credit suddenly made Mussolini realize that the British government did not intend to give him a free hand. The Fascist retort was to attack Britain by press and radio, stimulate anti-British propaganda in Egypt, and generally create apprehension in British circles regarding the security of the eastern Mediterranean. In August the British Admiralty replied by quietly moving the home fleet to the Mediterranean, where it assembled about 100 ships.

Despite popular assertions, the charge that the League's sudden firmness was due to British imperialism represented a superficial estimate of the situation. Many British conservatives wished to make a deal with Mussolini, and probably might have carried out their objective had it not been for the famous Peace Ballot, organized in April, 1934, in which more than 10,000,000 Englishmen expressed themselves in favor of economic sanctions in order to make the League a success. Realizing that an election was coming the government, which at first scoffed at the Peace Ballot, now adopted a new policy at Geneva.

To the outburst of pro-League sentiment in Britain, Mussolini replied by military maneuvers near the Brenner Pass, and by interviews declaring that Italy would pursue its aims "with Geneva, without Geneva, or against Geneva."

League Council Met In September to Decide.

EARLY in September the arbitral commission decided that neither Ethiopia nor Italy had been responsible for the Ual Ual affair. This decision should have ended the dispute, for under the 1928 treaty both parties had promised not to have recourse to force. The shipment of Italian troops to Africa continued, however, and as soon as the Council met in September to examine the problem the Italian government submitted a lengthy memorandum, constituting one of the most immoderate indictments of another nation known in the annals of diplomacy.

Admitting that there may have been some truth in the Italian charges against Ethiopia, could Italy constitute itself exclusive judge as to whether Ethiopia had fulfilled its international obligations? Obviously the outside world could not acquiesce in any such pretentions without admitting that all hope for international organization was dead.

In another effort to demonstrate that the League was interested in something more than the status quo, Sir Samuel Hoare, British foreign secretary, made a notable speech to the League Assembly on September 11 in which he declared that it was not enough to organize resistance to war; it was also necessary to remove its causes.

While moving into the sanctions camp, Britain by this emphasis held out a hope to Germany and Italy that changes might soon be effected by peaceful means.

On October 3, a few days after adjournment of the League Assembly, Italian troops invaded Ethiopia, and three days later they avenged Adowa. On the same day the League Council solemnly declared that Italy had resorted to war in disregard of its obligations—which included the Covenant, the Anti-War Pact and the Treaty of 1928. On October 9, 51 League members, meeting in the Assembly, gave silent approval to the Council's report. By the end of October League members had accepted the following measures to be applied against Italy beginning on November 18:

1. An arms embargo accepted by 50 states.
2. Prohibition of financial transactions, 47.
   Refusal to buy Italian goods, 43.
4. Embargo on certain raw materials, 45.

Italy Declared First Aggressor.

FOR THE FIRST time in its history the League of Nations had formally declared a member to be an aggressor and actually applied sanctions. In view of the general belief at the beginning of this dispute that Mussolini would have a free hand, this action was little short of a miracle.

The British shift in policy placed France in a difficult position. Mussolini had promised Laval to keep Hitler out of Austria. But now Britain, which had refused to accept any commitments with regard to central Europe, was demanding that France support a pro-League policy, which meant the sacrifice of the Franco-Italian entente. Mr. Laval did not intend to make this sacrifice without obtaining commensurate advantages from Britain.

In reply to French inquiries, the British government declared that it stood "for the collective maintenance of the Covenant in its entirety and particularly for steady and collective resistance to all acts of unprovoked aggression." Forced to choose between Italy or Britain and the League, M. Laval haltingly cast his lot with Britain, seeking meanwhile to dampen British enthusiasm for the Covenant.

The Baldwin government, for its part, was worried lest it become involved in a single-handed war with Italy. During October there seemed to be a real danger of a clash in the Mediterranean. To avoid this possibility, or at least obtain the assurance that it would not be alone to bear the brunt of Italian reprisals, Britain asked France if it could count on French naval assistance. On October 18, M. Laval replied that France interpreted the Covenant to imply "unlimited solidarity of action in the matter of military, air and naval assistance."

Hoare-Laval Plan Rejected by World.

ON DECEMBER 8 Sir Samuel Hoare and M. Laval suddenly formulated peace proposals offering Mussolini about half of Ethiopia, including a vast colonization zone, provided he brought the war to a close. In exchange, Ethiopia was to receive a port at Assab, and a connecting corridor through Italian territory. Power-politics seemed once more to triumph over the League, which had guaranteed Ethiopia's integrity.

But world opinion could not thus easily be dismissed. The small states at Geneva protested that they would not remain in a League dominated by the imperialistic whims of Britain and France. Neither would the British public acquiesce in this abandonment of the collective system.

As a result of these protests a new miracle occurred. On December 18 Sir Samuel Hoare resigned as foreign secretary under pressure of public indignation, in favor of the pro-Leaguer, Anthony Eden. At the same time the British government disavowed the Hoare-Laval plan at Geneva; while in Italy Mussolini, who is believed secretly to have initiated the plan, thundered that "this war of the poor, of the disinherited and of the proletarians" must be carried through to victory. For the moment world opinion had won a victory against imperialism.

The victory, however, proved short-lived. The Hoare-Laval proposal slowed up more effectively action by the League, such as the oil embargo. Meanwhile, Mussolini's armies continued to make a desperate effort to win a victory in Ethiopia before the heavy rains, which begin in June.

Overcome by Italian poison gas and by Italian bribes, Ethiopia collapsed when on May 2 Emperor Haile Selassie fled the country. Once more it has been demonstrated that an aggressive dictatorship can acquire what it wants through overpowering force and unscrupulous treaty violation without meeting effective resistance from the great status quo powers—most of which are liberal democracies.

The issue before the world today is whether these democracies are eventualy to be overwhelmed by the antiliberal dictatorships. If they are to offer resistance they must do it through a reorganized and strengthened League or through a return to the opportunistic, ruthless and ineffective methods of power-politics. The present trend is unmistakably in the latter direction. Whether it continues to be so depends upon the world's three great democracies—France, Britain and the United States. These powers can take the lead in building a new world organization, if they are willing to initiate peaceful changes which will meet the legitimate economic grievances of the "have-not" powers, and accept obligations in regard to collective security.

Robinson Asks Florida Canal, 'Quoddy Funds

Denies Action Would Be Formal Authorization of Two Projects.

By the Associated Press.

Senator Robinson (Democrat), Arkansas, told the Senate Commerce Committee yesterday his effort to revive the Florida ship canal and Passamaquoddy tidal power project in Maine was "at the instance of high Administration officials."

Robinson, majority floor leader, urged approval of his resolution for the appointment of engineering boards to study the two projects. Under the proposal, favorable reports from the engineers would authorize the President to allocate $10,000,000 to the canal and $9,000,000 to the Maine power dam for new work.

Branding the new action definitely as an Administration movement, Robinson asserted:

"The President desires some expression from Congress on the subject."

Vandenberg Disagrees.

He insisted, although the point was disputed by Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, that the resolution would not have the effect of definitely authorizing the canal or Passamaquoddy funds in future years.

The Democratic leader added, however, approval by the proposed boards would cause him to believe "the projects would be carried on by future allotments."

The resolution fixed June 30 as the date for the boards to file their reports on the two undertakings, but Robinson said he would not object to an amendment extending the time as long as 30 days.

He said he would oppose a resolution offered by Senator Vandenberg seeking to postpone further allotments until the next session of Congress and removing from the President authority to grant funds to continue the work.

Oppose Division.

Both Robinson and Senator Fletcher (Democrat), Florida, leader of the long fight for canal funds, objected to Vandenberg's suggestion to split the resolution in order to "allow each project to stand on its own merit." Fletcher said he also would oppose extending the date for filing reports beyond June 20.

Senator White (Republican), Maine, proposed that the resolution be amended so as to do away with the study boards and provide only specific authoriaztion for the President to make the allocations.

The committee recessed without reaching a discussion of the engineering merits of the Florida canal.

Spanish Mob Ejects Nuns From Home

Madrid, May 20 (A).—Labor and anticlerical troubes continued in various sections of Spain tonight to cause fresh worries for the new government of Premier Santiago Casares Quiroga.

Extremists at Talavera in Galicia Province ejected nuns from a convent and appropriated the building for "public use." Civil guards escorted the nuns back to their home and surrounded the structure to prevent further attacks.

Cloth mills at Castuera and Cabeza del Buey, in the same province, were closed when employers refused to grant requests for increased wages.

Merchant marine and restaurant workers ended their walkouts in Barcelona after their demands for higher pay were granted.

A strike of 17,000 Asturian miners threatened to spread over the entire Asturian "basin" and involve nearly 50,000 miners.

Soviet Prosecutor Charges Meteorologist Failed to Resist Semenhuk's Alleged Terror Reign on Island.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, May 20.—In the midst of his testimony in the murder trial of K. B. Semenchuk, "tyrant of Wrangel Island," a witness was yanked from the stand tonight and sent to jail on charges punishable by from six months to ten years' imprisonment.

He was Meteorologist K. Karbovsky, who was representative of the Communist Party on bleak Wrangel Island during Semenchuk's alleged reign of terror over a small official Soviet wintering party in 1934-35.

After a severe grilling, Karbovsky admjtted he put up no resistance to Semenchuk's "illegal acts" and gave the name of three Eskimos who died of starvation while he was on the island, although there was sufficient food.

The prosecutor accused him of criminal negligence and complicity in concealing enemies of the state. He demanded the meteorologist's arrest and the court agreed.

Building up a chain of evidence against Semenchuk, for whom he is expected to demand the death sentence, the prosecutor continued to call former memers of the Wrangel colony to testify as to the defendant's alleged misdeeds.

Insanity Plea Made.

The defense has attempted to show that Semenchuk was insane and believed himself "a man from Mars."

A state alienist expressed belief Semenchuk was only pretending to be a lunatic. While in jail awaiting trial, witnesses said, he insisted he was from another planet.

Dr. W. R. Wulfson of the Arctic station allegedly was slain by Semenchuk for opposing the dictatorship. L. Kutsevaloff, hydrologist, who found Wulfson's dog sled after the doctor's disappearance, joined other witnesses in expressing the opinion it was a case of murder.

The dog sled, he continued, was anchored in the snow in a manner attributable only to an expert driver, while it was Wulfson's first experience at driving dogs. S. P. Startseff, co-defendant, described as Semenchuk's "henchman," was Wulfson's sole companion on the trip. Witnesses have accused him of murdering the doctor on orders of Semenchuk.

Signs of Struggle.

Startseff testified he lost the doctor when the sleds became separated. Another witness said Dr. Wulfson's sled bore signs of a struggle. He had been ordered from the station during a storm to treat a sick Eskimo at a distant point and Startseff was sent to accompany him.

The court ordered Mrs. Semenchuk to remain in Moscow to face possible prosecution on a charge of perjury after she was accused of false statements on the witness stand by the prosecutor.

The defendant's wife testified Semenchuk was hard to get along with and she several times had thought of a divorce, but gave up the idea on account of her children.

She declared she heard famine stories while on the island and brought the matter to her husband's attention.

While she was being questioned about a statement allegedly made out of court that Semenchuk was "non-communistic," Prosecutor Vyshinsky accused her of perjury and the instructions from the court followed.

Townsend Sees House Gains

journed late yesterday afternoon Dr. Townsend rose to his feet and asked permission from Representative C. Jasper Bell, Missouri Democrat, who is chairman of the committee, to make a statement.

"I have here a prepared statement that is the embodiment of the Townsend Plan," asserted the witness. "There has been so much asking about what I know about the plan, I would like to end the controversy as to what it is here and now. I would like to take the personalities out of this investigation."

Committee Members Object.

Members of the committee, led by Representatives Hoffman and Joseph Gavagan (Democrat), of New York, objected.

But Representative John H. Tolan, of California, a Democratic Townsendite, asked that the 12-page statement be read into the record.

"Why not let Dr. Townsend tell us what is in it under direct testimony?" asked Representative Hoffman. "You wrote it yourself, didn't you, doctor?"

"Of course, I did," replied Dr. Townsend, and I would like to read it."

"But it's much better to have you tell us about it without reading it. If you wrote it you certainly know what is in it."

Representative Bell, from the chair, ruled that the statement could not be introduced into the record of the investigation at the time.

Then Representative Tolan called for a vote. By a count of 5 to 3 the committee voted to sustain the ruling of the chair, but copies of Dr. Townsend's statement, which dealt with the economic theories and philosophies of his "leisure for the aged" plan, were distributed to the committeemen.

Since the inception of the Townsend movement, club members in every part of the Nation have contributed "in the neighborhood of $1,000,000," the witness readily admitted.

"And what did the contributors receive in return?" asked James R. Sullivan, counsel of the committee.

"They got our organization, which is exactly what they paid for," Dr. Townsend replied.

"At present we have 8,000 clubs throughout the country, and a live, working organization."

Later, to newsmen, Dr. Townsend added he had had several conferences with Father Coughlin, Detroit radio priest and leader of the National Union for Social Justice, and also with Gerald K. Smith, an organizer for the Share-the-Wealth movement launched by the late Senator Huey P. Long, of Louisiana.

"No third party alliance is contemplated at this time," the bespectacled leader told reporters.

Burden on Nation's Poor.

The burden of taxation for financing his pension plan for the aged will fall upon the Nation's poor, Dr. Townsnd admitted yesterday.

"Where did you think the money was coming from to pay these pensions?" he was asked.

"Well, there are several sources," responded the witness.

"Didn't you plan to tax even the farmer?"

"Well, the farmer would benefit and the tax would be slight."

"You planned to tax the farmer in order to raise money. The farmer must have a license to farm?"

"That might be one plan."

"Yes."

Later Dr. Townsend said there were other possible ways of raising the money to pay the oldsters, who in turn, according to his plan, must spend every cent of their Government stipend.

Stamp Tax Suggested.

"It might be through a stamp tax," mused the elderly doctor, who, earlier in the day had said he never had made more than $3,000 a year in his practice of medicine.

Repeated questioning by Representative Hoffman developed that Dr. Townsend had little information concerning collection of the proposed taxes and the administration of his pension plan.

"A sales tax would raise the revenue," said the doctor. "We would not object to any method the gentlemen of Congress suggested to raise the money if it was better than any idea we had."

"Don't you know, doctor, that the burden of this tax would rest on the poor people of the Nation?" asked Representative Hoffman.

"Yes," responded Dr. Townsend in even tones, "the burden of any tax rests on the poor people because they are so numerous."

The age at which the pension would be paid might eventually be reduced from "60 to 55 or 50, Dr. Townsend conceded.

"When would the reduction take place?" he was asked.

"That I couldn't say," replied the doctor. "It would depend on the conditions of industry."

"And you expect these people to vote for Townsendites on the assumption that they will soon receive a pension?"

Will Vote for Townsendites.

"They will, too, as you will soon find out," responded the doctor.

Dr. Townsend denied that his organizatoin ever had taken contributions knowingly from poverty-stricken people.

As the afternoon wore on, Representative Gavagan began questioning the doctor about his theories as to what actually constituted eligibility to an old-age pension.

"Would men of wealth and women of wealth be eligible to receive $200 a month, just as poor people?" inquired the committeeman from New York.

"Certainly. If they spent the money it would be in circulation and aid industry," answered the doctor.

"Would J. P. Morgan be entitled to it?"

"Certainly."

"Would John D. Rockefeller, Henry Ford and William Randolph Hearst be entitled to it?"

Letters, Telegrams Read.

"Why, yes, of course."

"Perhaps," remarked Representative Gavagan, "Mr. Rockefeller would have some more dimes to give away then."

Earlier in the day Sullivan introduced a number of telegrams and letters relating to the political activities of Townsend's organization. These included a suggestion made in January, 1935, by Frank Peterson, erstwhile Townsend press agent, for a "march of 1,000,000 old people to Washington" to "see their Congressmen and Senators."

"During a two-week period they could call on one Senator after another, and get in the hair of Congressmen," Peterson's letter said, adding, "Congress would capitulate over night."

In still another letter, Peterson wrote Dr. Frank Dyer, West Coast organizer for Townsend, that Representative Thomas Blanton (Democrat), Texas, loomed as the "worst enemy" of the plan in the House, and recommended organizing his district and circulating a petition for his recall.

Senator L. J. Dickinson, Iowa Republican, "looks like our leader in that House," this letter said, concluding with the remark that "it will, of course, be a much harder struggle in the Senate because the gentlemen there are more individualistic and are here for longer terms."

One of Peterson's letters was signed "The Old Macaroni Bender."

Interested in Macaroni?"

"Did you ever know Peterson to be interested in macaroni?" Dr. Townsend was asked.

"What was his nationality?"

"He must have been of Italian descent," reflected Dr. Townsend, as the committeemen smiled.

Before the committee went into session yesterday afternoon groups of men and women who had come across the continent with the Townsend caravan held an informal discussion in the caucus room.

"If I get a pension," stormed one oldster, "I'm going to take a trip to the Mediterranean. I've always wanted to."

Lose Big Hips Fat Stomachs Double Chins
Lose Fat The Easy Way—Without Starvation Diets, or Back-Breaking, Bending and Rolling Exercises.
There is no mystery about this method. Doctors have been prescribing it for years. It is based on a scientific discovery of the medical profession that excess fat in many cases is caused by a little gland that does not work well.
Every drop of our blood goes through this tiny gland sixteen times a day. It produces about one and one-half drops of vital fluid every 24 hours. The action of this fluid on the blood is much the same as the action a good draft has on the burning of coal in a furnace. It turns on the "draft" that increases the speed with which food and fatty tissues "burn up".
If this gland doesn't pour out about one and one-half drops of its vital fluid a day, many people take on fat.
Doctors find a simple easy way to remedy this condition is to feed this gland the substance it lacks. Then, many people get rid of the excess flesh that swells out their figures in ugly bumps and lumps.
Marmola Prescription Tablets are based on this same method so generally used by modern doctors. Millions are using them with success. They are prepared by a world-famous medical laboratory. Their formula is given in every package so you know what you're taking.
For 28 years millions of fat people have found Marmola Prescription Tablets effective for the reduction of ugly fat. Don't take chances with starvation diets or back-breaking exercises. Get a box of Marmola from your druggist today.

Mrs. Hicks, R. L. Macneil Betrothed

Widow of Representative to Marry Scotch Clan Chief This Fall.

The announcement of the engagement of Mrs. Frederick C. Hicks, of Georgetown and Port Washington, N. Y., and Mr. Robert Lister Macneil, of Barra, Forty-fifth Chief of Clan Macneil of Scotland, is made today by Mrs. Hicks' aunt, Mrs. Philip Dandridge Laird, of New York.

Mr. Macneil, known in Scotland as The Macneil, is a noted architect now living at North Hempstead Turnpike, Great Neck, Long Island. Mrs. Hicks is the widow of Frederick C. Hicks, Alien Property Custodian and former Representative from New York State.

The marriage, according to the announcement, will take place quietly the end of the year. Washington friends of Mrs. Hicks, however, have been much interested in the rumor that the wedding will take place in Washington in June at the Georgetown home of Mrs. Hicks now occupied by the Undersecretary of State and Mrs. William Phillips. This house was designed by Mrs. Hicks and built under her personal supervision and is one of the show places of Georgetown.

Bride-to-Be Was Deb Here.

As Miss Marie Christie Stevens, daughter of Maj. Pierre Stevens, U. S. A., and Mrs. Stevens, Mrs. Hicks was a belle of the Army and Navy and exclusive social circles in Washington in her debutante years. She was married to Representative Frederick C. Hicks in 1920, and their home was one of the most important official centers in Washington. After the death of her husband, Mrs. Hicks lived in Washington until she leased her Georgetown house and bought an estate at Port Washington three years ago. She has lived there since with her son, Frederick Stevens Hicks, who is now 15. Mrs. Hicks' stepdaughter, Miss Georgiana Hicks, who was a popular debutante in Washington, was married eight years ago to Paul C. Kelly, now captain in the United States Army.

Mr. Macneil has two daughters 12 and 11 years old, and a son, 6 years old.

Before the World War, Mr. Macneil lived in Washington and was popular in the diplomatic set, many of whom he had known in London and other foreign capitals. He was architect for the Cuban Embassy and many of the important homes of Washington. During the war he returned to Scotland but came back to this country afterward.

Clan Owns Isle of Barra.

The Isle of Barra of Clan Macneil has been the Macneil clan headquarters for hundreds of years and has played an important part in Scotch history.

Mr. Macneil owns a picturesque old farmhouse and farm lands and orchards in Vermont, where it is expected the honeymoon will take place.

Mrs. Hicks has endeared herself to music and art circles in Washington because of her generous sponsorship of civic projects and the musicales given at the Hicks home have been important events of the Washington season.

Democrats' Club Holds Festival At Roof Garden

Mrs. Lewis Is Palm Reader; Miss Anderson Sells a Dolly Madison Doll.

By Dudley Harmon.

Members of the Women's National Democratic Club, who for days before their annual spring outdoor festivals in past years have anxiously scanned the skies and watched for signs of rain, decided this spring to take no chances on the weather. They chose the roof garden of the Washington Hotel as the scene of their sixth annual fete, held yesterday afternoon and attended by hundreds of Democrats and their friends.

Bridge tables, grab-bags, flower and cake booths, a country fair, and an old curiosity shop were some of the attractions. Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis, wife of Senator Lewis, who has spent many hours this season as a fortune teller at various functions, read palms again yesterday. Dr. Laura Brennan and Miss Isabel Magee, who were dressed in gypsy costumes, also foretold the future for guests.

Yesterday was Dolly Madison's birthday, and little Miss Alethea Anderson, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Raymond Anderson and granddaughter of Mrs. John Grimsley, executive secretary of the club, wearing a Dolly Madison dress made by her grandmother, sold the doll dressed by Mrs. Rennie Taylor in an exact copy of a white satin evening gown once worn by Mrs. Madison. Another doll, this one dressed in Rumanian peasant style and donated by Mrs. Roosevelt, was auctioned off later in the afternoon.

Mrs. Edward Meigs, president of the club, and Mrs. Samuel Herrick, chairman of the festival, stood in the doorway and welcomed the guests as they entered. Mrs. Garner, wife of the Vice President, arrived early, wearing a white coat and hat. Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State, wore a short black coat over a lavender print dress, and was accompanied by her niece, Miss Sarah Witz, a frequent visitor in the Capital. Other Cabinet wives present yesterday included Mrs. George H. Dern, wife of the Secretary of War, whose daughter, Miss Betsy Dern, assisted at the fair; Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, wife of the Secretary of Commerce, and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture.

Mrs. Key Pittman, who arrived just in time to see the auction, wore a beige lace dress and a brown hat. Others from official ranks who attended the Democratic festival were Mrs. Joseph Robinson, Mrs. Pat Harrison, Mrs. Paul Greever, Mrs. Blair Bannister, Mrs. Morris Sheppard, Mrs. Elbert Thomas, Mrs. Benton McMillin, Mrs. Mark Bristol, Mrs. Stanley Reed and Mrs. Wayne Chatfield Taylor. Miss Beatrice Phillips, daughter of the Undersecretary of State and Mrs. William Phillips, was busy helping the members of the committee, as were Miss Rose Page and Miss Annabelle Essary. Mrs. John Allen Daugherty, who donated a quilt later sold at auction, was also present.

The Ambassador and several members of the staff are in Cuba for the Presidential inauguration, and were therefore unable to attend.

Miss Aranha, the guest of honor, will leave Washington May 30, for New York, to sail for Brazil after visiting at the Embassy for several months.

Others in the dinner party last night were the First Secretary of the Embassy and Mme. de Prado; the Second Secretary and Mme. de Sousa Freitas; Mme. Reis, wife of Lieut. Commander Reis, Assistant Naval Attache; Mme. Lobo, wife of the Attache; the Second Secretary, Mr. Decio de Moura; the Commercial Attache, Mr. Paulo Hasslocher, and the Chancellor, Mr. Cid Amaral.

Culbertsons to Sail for London For a Visit of Several Weeks

Will Stop Over in Philadelphia to See Their Daughter in the Operetta, 'Utopia Unlimited;' Winants, Mr. Hewes Going Abroad.

When the French liner Normandie leaves her pier in East River Tuesday for Europe, among her passengers will be the former Ambassador to Chile and Mrs. William S. Culbertson, who will spend a month or six weeks in London. Before sailing, Mr. and Mrs. Culbertson plan to stop over in Philadelphia to see a performance of "Utopia Unlimited," the operetta in which their daughter, Miss Junia Culbertson, has an important part. "Utopia Unlimited" is being staged by the Philadelphia Academy of Music, where Miss Culbertson has been a student during the past winter.

They will arrive in England at the height of the London season and expect to "take in" many of the events which make June and July the most brilliant months of the year there.

They will attend the Wimbledon tennis matches, and in all probability the two garden parties scheduled at Buckingham palace in place of the regular court presentations. Since the court is in mourning, debutantes of the London season will be presented to King Edward at these two parties. In addition, Ascot week, the races at Epsom Downs, and the Henley Regatta, will help make Mr. and Mrs. Culbertson's stay a busy one.

Mr. Clarence Hewes, will close his home on Massachusetts avenue next week preparatory to sailing Thursday on the Berengaria for London, where he has taken a house for the summer. On the same ship will go the Attache of the British Embassy, Mr. Benjamin Plunket.

Also bound for Europe, although more for business than for pleasure, are former Governor John G. Winant, of New Hampshire, and Mrs. Winant, who sailed yesterday aboard the Manhattan from New York. Mr. Winant, chairman of the Social Securities Board, will go to Geneva as head of the official delegation to the annual conference of the International Labor Organization. This will be the second time he has gone there in this capacity, as last summer he headed the first delegation ever sent from this country to the conference.

Former Governor Winant has had an unusual career. Although the son of a wealthy New York family, and educated at St. Paul's and Princeton, he has always been more interested in labor problems than in society. He began his political career as a member of the New Hampshire House of Representatives, and in the fall of 1934 President Roosevelt appointed him chairman of the board which arbitrated the nation-wide textile strike in September of that year.

For Love or Money

By Rob Eden.

Brenda Fayre, 22, is the sole support of her invalid sister, Lally. And Lally is secretly in love with Val Sargent, boyish but brilliant young writer who has the apartment above theirs where he is writing a novel.

Brenda had kept secret from her sister her own misfortune in losing her job and now keeps secret the sort of work she has found to do—at $50 a week and 1 per cent commission on sales. For Brenda is a "siren" for Walter Jason, promoter and gold mining stock salesman. Wearing luxurious clothes, furnished by Jason, she entertains the men who are prospective buyers of Jason's stock. Brenda is convinced that Jason's business is crooked but regards her duty to Lally as her first consideration.

CHAPTER ELEVEN.

THE SILENCE between the two sisters was a strange, unnatural one. It built a wall between them, Brenda felt, a wall that shouldn't be there. She on one side of the wall and Lally on the other, Lally and her chair. She touched Lally again, but even when she felt Lally's thin shoulders through her dress, the wall didn't disappear.

She wanted to talk, but she didn't know what to say, so she sat as still as Lally was sitting. Tense, too, and as she sat the night stretched like black rubber pulling farther and farther apart. The thin, fine bubbles of light were distant bridge lamps in windows, street lamps on corners and headlights on autos. Thin, so thin they would break with a pop at the first gust of wind that came along. Although she didn't know it, she was unconsciously waiting for the wind that would break the lights, and the storm that would snap the rubber darkness.

The vines crawling up on either side of the balcony were tense, their stems of fine wire. Not soft and tender and clinging graceful as they usually were.

Echoing back and back at Brenda was Lally's cry, although there must have been silence now for a long, long time between them. "I must walk!" In Brenda's ears the vibration of the words came and went, grew louder, then softer, then louder again. Her brain was singing with them, every bit of her flesh felt them, as if they were living words.

But the darkness didn't rip open, and the lights around the little balcony didn't break. Gradually the tension ceased. Brenda felt it and as it went, Lally's words went, too, slowly, the echo of them that was so physically strong. Lally's hands began to relax on the arms of her chair, and she gave a little sigh.

"I'm sorry, dear. I didn't mean to say anything."

Brenda couldn't speak yet, but she bent over and kissed the fingers that were so close to her.

The feel of Lally's cool flesh on her lips brought her sister no closer. The wall was still there, separating them — the wall that Brenda could not understand.

"Val says one of my morning-glories will be blooming on his porch tomorrow. We're to go up and see it. Maybe we can go up before you go to work. Funny little morning-glories. I never thought they'd reach so high."

"Would you like the radio on?"

Silence.

"No, I'd like to sit here—just like this." Lally reached up, took the hairpins from the golden knot at the back of her head, and a tumble of curls came down over her shoulders. "There, that's better."

They sat in silence again, not a tense silence any more, but an uncomfortable silence for Brenda. For the first time in her life she felt she didn't know Lally. She felt that her sister was almost a stranger to her. Lally, who was always so easy to know, Lally whose every thought was mirrored in her blue eyes, her pain, her joy, her sadness.

"It's my job," Brenda said to herself. "I haven't been spending enough time with her. We're not so close as we were, because I'm away more. I've left her to Val. I must try to be with her more." Then aloud, "Perhaps I can get off tomorrow and we can rent a car and go for a ride."

"That would be fine—only, Brenda, Val's found a new garden shop, and he's promised to take me there. He found it on one of his walks."

"We might go in the car—if I can get off. We wouldn't need a car with a chauffeur if Val went. He could drive——"

"He's not home yet. He went out for dinner and a walk," Lally murmured looking up at the roof of the balcony which was the floor of his porch. "I tried to make him stay for dinner, but he wouldn't. What's the matter, Brenda?" For she felt the quick movement of Brenda's hand in hers, a convulsive movement.

"Nothing, nothing," Brenda heard herself say.

Everything, she wanted to say. The wall between her and Lally crashed down. She could almost see it tumbling away, hear the bricks as they fell one by one. With the wall gone, everything was so clear. So terribly clear. Everything that Lally had said, all her tenseness, all the uncomfortable silence. That wild passionate prayer to walk.

So blind, so blind. Brenda took her hand away from Lally's as gently as she could, for she didn't want to give herself away.

The wall was a wall Lally had built up around her secret, but Brenda knew the secret now as surely as if Lally had said quite simply, "I love him."

She sat looking up at Lally's profile, etched against the darkness, at her lips which were half parted, at the hair that fell around her shoulders. In the night there was no glint to it.

Brenda's hands were trembling, and her lips were quivering, and the blood was surging, surging in her temples, a rush of it that tinged the darkness with crimson. Back of everything, back of Lally and the night and the fright of her discovery was that echo, "I must walk!"

She wants to walk, she must walk because she loves Val, thought Brenda. When she didn't know she loved him, it didn't matter so much. But now she wants to walk because she loves him.

All the time she had been accepting him, day after day, laughing with Lally at the things he did, the things he said. Day after day until the days had strung into seven weeks. Glad that Lally had found a good companion. Never thinking of anything else, never dreaming that Lally was falling in love with him. Never thinking of love. Never thinking of Lally as a woman, still thinking of her as a child, as she and Roger had always thought of her. The child, Lally.

Accepting Val in the casual comfortable way one would accept a brother. That was the way she imagined Lally was accepting him, too. As she had Roger. Forgetting that Lally was nearly 20 with a woman's mind, and a woman's body.

Lally, who had never loved a man before, who knew no other love for a man than that she had known for Roger.

That was why she was changed, why the little things that once interested her didn't interest her any longer. The comings and goings of tenants at the Corwin, the antics of Peter. Her lack of curiosity in the Jason enterprises. Everything had given way to her absorbing love for Val. He had taken Brenda's place, which had once been first in Lally's life. Brenda knew that she was second now, and Val was first. Val was everything to Lally.

Did Val Know?

And Val? Did he know that Lally loved him? Brenda shook her head slowly. He wouldn't know. Lally wouldn't let him know. She had even meant to keep her secret from Brenda. She thought no one knew it.

"I think you should go to bed, Lally," she said when she felt she could trust her voice.

"A little longer, dear. It's so lovely out here——"

Brenda's nail bit into the palms of her hand. Yesterday, this afternoon, she would have thought nothing of that remark. "A little longer dear." Tonight it had a clear meaning for her. It meant that Lally wanted to stay up until she heard Val's footsteps upstairs.

They came presently, so soft the girls could hardly hear them, because he had seen no light in 519 and he thought the sisters were asleep and didn't want to disturb them.

Brenda watched Lally closely when the footsteps came, and the slight shutting of a door on the porch was heard. She saw Lally lean forward, look up. She was ready in a few moments for her announcement that she was tired and wanted to go to bed.

When they were in bed and the light was out, Brenda listened for a long time to Lally's movements in bed. Finally they stopped and she knew Lally was asleep. She couldn't sleep herself, however. At midnight the moonlight crept into the little room and shed its pale beams on Lally's chair.

It spotted each bit of cane on the back with silver and left a trail of the same silver on the leather-padded arms. It outlined the big wheels and Brenda found herself staring at the chair until she could stand it no longer. She rose quietly, moved the chair into the living room where it was out of sight. When she came back, there was a pool of moonlight on the floor where the chair had been, picking out the flaws in the cheap rug, dancing like bright silver dust on the dull gray surface.

Slowly the pool moved onto Lally's bed and crept up to the middle of it, outlining the frail form under the blanket. For a long time it lingered on the legs that couldn't walk or dance or run.

Women Present No "Problem" In Finnish Life

Wife of Minister Says the Feminine Finn Engages in All Pursuits.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

A YEAR AND A HALF in the United States, and Mme. Jarnefelt, wife of the Minister from Finland, has not once been homesick—"until recently, when we began planning to go back for the summer," she said yesterday over a cup of tea at the Finnish Legation.

But now that bags are being packed and passage has been booked for a ship that on May 29 will sail from New York "straight to Helsingki," memories of her native land are making her "eager to get back."

In view of this, her comments yesterday revolved around those memories, as she told something of the women of her country—their interests and opportunities.

She revealed, incidentally, that most Americans she has met know little about Finland; seem to think, in fact, "it is just a small European country deserving some notice because it paid its debt to the United States."

Large as France.

Then, guide-book fashion, she pridefully pointed out that it is as large as France in area and is second in population of all the Scandinavian countries; that it is heavily wooded and dotted with lakes; that the climate is pleasant ("not nearly so cold as you might think"); and that the "woman question" precipitates no problems at all, there.

The feminine Finn is a familiar figure in public life, she explained. "There are many women in law and medicine and in all lines of business and industry. You see women working side by side with men everywhere in our cities and rural districts. Most of our street car conductors are women, and in increasing numbers women are becoming established in the timber industry. Men in Finland do not mind, because there are enough jobs to go around."

Kitchen Work Eliminated.

The servant problem is solved by a method that would probably appeal to working wives everywhere. Meals for each family in the apartment houses are prepared in a central kitchen with a staff of employes who serve all the residents. The wife makes her selection of meals for the day from a menu brought to her each morning. Thus she is relieved of marketing, cooking, serving and dish washing.

Mme. Jarnefelt said, however, that "looking at marketing from an American point of view, it seems to me a housewife would be deprived of much pleasure if someone else took care of that phase of home management.

"I have never seen anything like the markets in this country," she went on. "Such variety of products and so attractively arranged!"

Complimentary in every comment about America, but particularly so about the women, Mme. Jarnefelt said: "They are well informed, courteous, perfectly groomed and as charming and entertaining as women I have seen anywhere." Which, it would seem, is saying a good deal because she has known and observed women of many lands. For four years, she lived in Japan, while her father was the Minister from Finland to that country. For seven years she was on the staff of a newspaper in Helsingki and interviewed many famous women who visited the Finnish capital.

Misses Newspaper Work.

Her journalistic work is one thing she misses a great deal in this country. "In Finland, you know, we say one never gets over having been on the stage or on a newspaper."

While her favorite medium of expression is writing, Mme. Jarnefelt is also very much interested in music. Which is natural—since she is related by marriage to one of Finland's most noted composers, Sibelius, and to Armas Jarnefelt, also a popular musician and composer.

Says the Feminine Finn Is Free

Harris & Ewing.

MME. EERO JARNEFELT,

wife of the Minister from Finland, is the only journalist among the "Diplomatic wives." This month she and her husband will return to Helsingki, where she worked on a newspaper for seven years.

Today's Health Talk

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Black Water Fever.

We have noted the steady decline in yellow fever because of proper quarantine of known cases and screening against the mosquito. That malaria has not been wiped out is due in part to neglect and to inherent difficulties in districts where the disease abounds. A certain percentage of the population will fail to observe sanitary precautions and, wherever the anopheles mosquito can exist, fresh cases will appear as long as she is permitted to suck the blood of afflicted persons and transfer the parasites thus acquired to those who are susceptible.

Chills, Fever Symptoms.

Attention should be called to a disease that is either colsely associated with malaria or that is caused by one of the same species of parasite—plasmodium falciparum. While it has not been definitely traced to this particular organism, yet the malady appears only in malarial regions and in persons who are subject to a malignant type of the infection. Some writers believe that it is brought on by the excessive use of quinine, while others feel that it is an allergic phenomenon in which the drug plays an active part. Residence in a malarial section and contact with the estivo-autumnal (summer-autumn) type of parasite for a year or two predisposed to the condition.

The symptoms appear suddenly and resemble the typical cycle with chills, fever, sweating, headache, and marked exhaustion. The patient is greatly weakened and depressed, although the mind is clear. There is much anxiety and restlessness. The urine, upon standing, turns black, hence the name, "black water fever." When first passed it is slightly red or pink, but it does not contain blood cells, the color coming from the hemoglobin of the blood.

Rest Is Best Cure.

During the acute attack the temperature may rise to 105 degrees F. Jaundice appears early and is quite intense, although there is no retention of bile in the blood. The pulse is quite rapid and sometimes out of proportion to the temperature. Within a few hours the number of red cells become markedly reduced, dropping from normal to half that number or even less. The white cells are increased. Many of these patients will show malarial parasites in the blood.

Treatment consists of absolute rest in bed. Chilling must be avoided and fluid nourishment should be given in large quantities. This may consist of broth, fruit juices and glucose solution. Everything possible must be done to maintain the kidneys in activity. One result to be feared is suppression of urine and, in this connection, irrigating the colon with normal salt solution is recommended. In some cases, glucose and alkalies are given directly into a vein.

Child's Inhibitions Sometimes Fault Of Parents' Mistake

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

Too often it is the most loving and devoted mothers who are worst for their children. It sometimes seems as if the most successful mothers were those who are selfish and exacting, and neglect their children in a search for their own pleasure and satisfaction.

Mrs. Brown always nurses her children through even the most trifling ailment. She never leaves their bedside. At the first symptom of a cold, she cancels every engagement and shuts herself in to amuse and care for the young invalid. Her children are always sick, but Mrs. Brown considers it a privilege, not a sacrifice, to tend them.

Mrs. Smith, on the other hand, can be seen at parties even when everyone knows that one of her youngsters is seriously ill. She says that a professional nurse is far better able to look after the child than she is. No doubt she is right. Certainly her children are sick less often than Mrs. Brown's.

There is, however, a mean road between the two extremes. Mrs. Brown's children have come to enjoy ill health. It is very gratifying to be the center of attention and to have one's mother all to one's self. The children exaggerate every tiny symptom and go to bed with alacrity. Bed means long hours with mother reading aloud or inventing new games.

The Smith children, remembering bleak hours of loneliness with mother all dressed up for a party only peeping in to say "good night," do their best to keep well.

Real sickness, such as measles, pneumonia, a broken bone, require a mother's care; but minor ailments, such as cold, headaches, cuts and bruises, are best neglected a little. The child should go to bed, but should be taught to amuse himself.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Young Mother Gives Advice to 'Nedda;' Is Shocked at 'Nineteen's' Scolding, and Asks About Dancing Classes.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a married woman with two children and I love to dance. I cannot afford expensive lessons but would like to know of a place where I could learn ballroom dancing quickly and inexpensively. Either daytime or evening classes would be considered. I think your column is splendid and was very shocked to read the letter from "Nineteen" in The Post of May 13, in which she upbraided you so sharply for the counsel you gave "Worried Aunt" in an earlier issue.

• • • •

As for "Nedda," the 17-year-old girl who wrote your column May 11 to say she was so much in love with a certain boy of 20 that she would marry him secretly if he would consent to such an arrangement, I urge her to read "Secret Marriage," by Kathleen Norris. It might disclose to her the inevitable disillusionment of an early, hasty marriage. The story tells what happened when a lovely girl married a wonderful boy whom she thought she loved. I do hope "Nedda" will read it. Yours sincerely, MOUSEY.

Community Center Teaches Ballroom Dancing.

DEAR MOUSEY: Lessons in ballroom dancing are given under the auspices of the Community Center at the following public schools: Langley Junior High School, First and T streets northeast, Fridays at 7:15 p. m., 25 cents for an hour's lesson; Ben Murch School, Thirty-sixth and Ellicott streets, Fridays at 8:30 p. m., 25 cents a lesson, and Roosevelt High School, Thirteenth and Upshur streets, Thursday evenings from 7 to 9 o'clock, 25 cents a lesson.

• • • •

Also, there is a complete list of local dancing academies to be found in the classified section of the Washington telephone directory. I would suggest that you call a number of these academies and get information concerning daytime classes and prices.

• • • •

I am gald you approve of this column and am happy to pass your suggestion along to "Nedda." I recall having read portions of the story you mention when it ran in serial form in some publication, and agree with you that the philosophy therein presented by the author is nicely applicable to "Nedda's" case. M. H.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Please advise me if there is a day or night high school or college here where I might enroll for a summer course of study in order to obtain high school credits. Also, where may one be tutored in tennis? Yours truly. B. F.

• • • •

DEAR B. F.: Mr. E. J. Lockwood, director of summer and evening schools in Washington, can give you full information about the sort of classes you are interested in. His office is at Central High School, Thirteenth and Clifton streets northwest, and he can be contacted by telephoning NAtional 6000 and asking for his office.

• • • •

About the tennis, I suggest you make inquiry of the Department of Playgrounds, Room 313, District Building, Fourteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue. Anyone there can tell you what the chances are of receiving such instruction on local playgrounds. There are such classes, I believe, but I am not sure about special individual instruction being given. M. H.

Prospective Beau.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: The description of herself given by your correspondent of May 18, who signed herself "Miss Thirty Two," has attracted my attention and interest. Although I am in my early forties, a bachelor with a good position, I am also what some might describe as an "idealist." If it can be arranged, I should like very much to meet "Miss Thirty Two;" that is, if such a request does not strike you as too presumptuous. Sincerely, MR. FORTY TWO.

• • • •

DEAR MR. FORTY TWO: Even supposing "Miss Thirty Two" looks with favor upon your tentative suit, still it is impossible for me to put you in communication with her. You see, you failed to furnish your name, address or telephone number. M. H.

Letters to Miss Haworth's column are now answered in the Sunday issue of The Washington Post as well as daily on the woman's page. Her column will be found each Sunday on the household page, Section IV.

Women Vote in 5 Western Nations

Latin America Follows U. S. Lead in Suffrage.

Women are permitted to vote in five of the 21 countries of the Western Hemisphere, according to the current Pan - American Bulletin. Since the United States took the lead in 1920, equal voting laws have been adopted in Ecuador, Brazil, Uraguay and Cuba. In the latter country women voted for the first time in the election of January, 1936, when 40 per cent of the votes cast were cast by women voters.

In other Latin countries of the Pan-American Union the women's vote is a subject in the foreground of political discussion and in many of these countries amendments to existing laws are before the legislature.

Play This at Your Party

SEE THE HAPPY grins at Mary Anne's party! They've spent the last hour playing that uproarious game, "Murder."

Charlie, the paper-capped salad-passer, was the "murderer." He got that way by pulling the shortest of the sticks in Jim's hand. Harry, by pulling the longest stick, became "detective." Out in the hall for him while the rest conferred.

Charlie did not tell anyone he was to be the "murderer," but they all cooked up a plot about spending the night in a haunted house. Then the lights went out, everybody milled around, and Charlie hissed in Mollie's ear, "You're stabbed in the back for meddlin' with the hidden jewels!"

When the lights came on, Mollie was found gracefully expiring on the sofa, muttering "Jools!" In came Harry, the detective, asking questions. Everyone could answer truthfully except the murderer, who had to lie as long as he could get away with it.

Charlie was marvelous. He kept them guessing for nearly an hour. When his foul motive was uncovered and his alibi shattered he was sentenced to pass the salad.

To make your next party a wow, get hints from our 40-page booklet, "Good Parties." Stunts, games, riddles, parlor tricks, novelties for high school or church parties, ideas for showers, holidays, birthdays. Delicious menus, correct form of invitations. Just a treasure!

SITTING: A Halfway Station on the Road to Standing. As shown in yesterday's pictures, the baby sits alone at approximately 36 weeks of age. Today, we show the baby during one year of progress in the art of sitting up. In the first picture, he is shown at 24 weeks of age, propped slightly by pillows. In the second picture, he is shown at 32 weeks, sitting alone. At 40 weeks, he is shown able to sit up and turn to the side, at the same time. And in the final picture, we see him at 52 weeks of age, a graduated "sitter." TOMORROW: Sitting, Part Five.

District Traffic Remedies Asked In House Report

26-Point Program Seeks More Regulation for Pedestrians.

Increase in Police Force Also Is Recommended by Sub-Committee.

The House District Committee yesterday adopted the comprehensive report of its sub-committee on traffic, proposing a 26-point program, and then turned its critical fire on the Capital Transit Co. for permitting overcrowding in buses and street cars.

Submitted by Representative Randolph Carpenter (Democrat), of Kansas, and based upon extensive hearings, the sub-committee report covers a wide range of suggested remedies for traffic congestion and motor vehicle accidents.

Major proposals included:

An amendment to the traffic act to regulate pedestrians.

A 10 per cent increase in the personnel of the Metropolitan Police Department.

Further staggering of hours of Government employes and a change in the opening hour of schools to a time later than that of the Federal establishments.

Subway Study.

A serious study of subways at the end of three years if Washington's population continues to grow at present rate.

Summarizing its own report, the sub-committee offered three recommendations:

1. Not more traffic laws, rules and regulations, but less confusion, greater simplification, and better observance and enforcement of present regulations.

2. The most effective way to reduce accidents and at the same time act as a deterrent to reckless driving is the presence of well-trained, intelligent, supervised and properly disciplined uniformed policemen.

3. Close co-operation between all traffic regulatory and enforcing agencies with the general public.

As a preface to its 26 recommendations the sub-committee called attention to some of its major findings relative to Washington's traffic problem.

It pointed out that since 1925 the number of motor vehicle registrations in the District has doubled, giving the National Capital a car for every 2.6 persons and the higheat proportional registration in the United States. Nevertheless, there has been substantially no increase in the traffic police force during that time and the number of motorcycle policemen has been cut from 93 in 1928 to 54 now.

9,024 Accidents.

"During 1935 there were 9,024 accidents in the District," the report stated, "of which 2,408, or about one-fourth, involved pedestrians. Of these, about one-half were caused by the carelessness of the pedestrian. This carelessness, in most cases, was evidenced by crossing between intersections, crossing not at cross walks, or crossing against the signals.

"The principal accident-producing violations by motorists during this time were failure to yield right of way, reckless driving, speeding, driving while drunk, and turning improperly."

The sub-committee stated that accidents have decreased at intersections where signal lights have been installed. It cited the large proportion of taxicabs to the populatoin and the small percentage of persons using the mass transportation facilities.

Mechanical defects in autos were blamed for at least nine deaths and 5 per cent of the accidents in 1935.

Enactment of three bills, one of which has become a law since the report went to the printer, was recommended. These are the act to permit suspension or revocation of driving rights of nonresidents and the bills to increase penalties for first-offense reckless driving and to authorize semiannual inspection of motor vehicles. The first has passed the Senate and the latter the House.

Additional appropriations were urged to provide broader engineering surveys by the Department of Vehicles and Traffic, an educational campaign in safe driving and for enlargement of examiners so that drivers may be re-examined every three years when they apply for renewal of permits.

The sub-committee urged continuance of swift punishment for infractions of rules and prompt suspension of permits for speeding and other serious violations.

Traffic courts were asked to keep longer hours and to hold night sessions, if necessary, to clear their congested dockets.

The District Commissioners were asked to study the advisability of establishing more one-way streets, especially during rush periods, of changing the color of red lights above fire alarm boxes, and to prepare and submit to the next Congress plans and estimates for:

A five-year program of street-widening, a re-design of Thomas and Scott circles, a five-year bridge-building program, underpasses for street cars at Dupont and Thomas cricles, widening of underpass at Massachusetts avenue and Rock Creek parkway, a five-ear program of traffic light improvements, pedestrian tunnels at major intersections in congested areas, safety islands where necessary, overpasses for Thirteenth street at Florida avenue northwest and New York avenue at Florida avenue northeast, and a low-level highway from K street to Foxhall road on bed of the old Chesapeake & Ohio Canal.

The sub-committee recommended larger appropriations for street lighting and better lighting for Mount Vernon Memorial Boulevard, though not in the District.

The demand for an investigation of the mass transportation problem was made at the committee meeting by Representative Hull (Progressive), of Wisconsin, who complained that he had had to stand up the other night riding home on a Chevy Chase bus.

Charging that the bus and street car service is growing steadily worse, he proposed that the Government operate buses of its own. He was especially critical of some of the aged buses used by the Capita Transit Co.

Two Children, 7 Others Hurt In Car Crashes

Girl, Boy Run Into Truck; 3 Injured When Auto Strikes Bus.

Nine persons were injured, three seriously, in traffic accidents yesterday.

Elizabeth McQuet, Negro, 2, of 38 Patterson street northeast, was injured critically when she ran against a truck in front of 13 N street northeast. She was taken to Gallinger Hospital. She suffered a fractured skull.

The driver, Walter Kendall, Negro, 29, of 1216 S street northwest, is being held pending the outcome of the child's injuries.

Carl Jiles, Negro, 3, also suffered a fractured skull when he ran against a truck while playing in front of his home, 1510 sixth street northeast. He was taken to Freedmen's Hospital. The truck was driven by Roger W. Schweikert, 37, of 706 Seventeenth street northeast.

Douglas Silverman, 6, of 702 H street northeast, suffered a fractured right leg when hit by a taxicab operated by Charles M. Skidmore, 28, of 234 Eighth street northeast, while he was crossing the street near his home.

Three passengers suffered minor injuries when the automobile in which they were riding collided at Forty-first and Fessenden streets northwest with a Capitol Transit bus.

Those injured were George A. Whittett, 15, of 3271 Van Hazen street northwest; Florence B. Griffin, 42, of 3726 Connecticut avenue northwest, driver of the car, and Evelyn Nichol, 18, of 5802 Broad Branch road northwest.

Adley Robey, 42, of 401 H street northwest, was treated at Emergency Hospital for a fractured skull and severe lacerations when the bread truck he was driving collided with a taxicab at Fourth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest.

Paul E. Lockhart, 40, of 919 East Capiotl street, was treated at Sibley Hospital for cuts when he was knocked down by an automobile while crossing North Capitol street.

Democratic Convention Slate Picked

1,729 Vote; Over 1,200 at Willard Booth; 12 Elected.

Mrs. Harriman and M. S. McConihe Named to Committee Posts.

Twelve national convention delegates and other officers were elected yesterday in the District Democratic primary.

As there were no contests the vote was exceptionally light. Exactly 1,729 ballots were cast for every candidate. More than 1,200 persons voted in the Willard Hotel booths.

John B. Colpoys, State central committee chairman, said:

"We could easily have brought out 30,000 votes if there had been any contest. Washington, you know, is 80 per cent Democratic."

George E. Allen, District Commissioner and one of the most active leaders of the local party organization, was chosen last night by the central committee as spokesman in the new drive to give District residents a vote in national elections.

To Plead at Philadelphia.

He was instructed to appear before the Resolutions committee at the Philadelphia convention and urge inclusion of a plank in the party platform permiting District residents to vote for President and elect representatives in the Senate and House.

The committee decided to make a real fight to win the franchise right. A constitutional amendment would be required to give local men and women a voice in national affairs.

Delegates elected, with a half vote each, included Commissioner Allen, Colpoys, Evelyn C. Condon, Joseph J. Cotter, Leslie C. Garnett, George P. Marshall, Malcim S. McConihe, Watson B. Miller, Secretary Daniel C. Roper, Robert T. Scott, John Walsh and Robert W. Woolley.

Colpoys Is Re-elected.

Colpoys was re-elected central committee chairman. Other members chosen: Harry J. Wells, Russell Balderson, James V. Beyer, J. Ennest Mitchell, Commissioner Allen William McGuire, John Locher, Howard Stafford, William C. Cleary, Richard Dickson, Sam B. Bagnan, Bramhall, Scott, Edward Roche, Frank Cahill, Michael J. Coffey and John J. McConnell.

As expected, McConihe was elected committeeman and Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, national committeewoman.

Delegates were instructed in the primary to vote as a unit on all issues at Philadelphia.

No effort was made to bind the delegation, but every member is friendly to President Roosevelt.

Most of the votes were brought out by local young Democrats. Those in charge of the Willard polls included Bramhall, Stafford and John Bracken.

Oriental Shrine Banquets in City

The annual banquet of the Ladies' Oriental Shrine, now in session at its twenty-second annual convention, was held last night at the Mayflower Hotel with 1,000 women in attendance.

The banquet followed a day of secret sessions given over to discussions of proposed changes in the by-laws and to routine organization matters dealing with the work of the national and local chapter committees. The changes in the by-laws, proposed by the national president, Mrs. Pattillo, of College Park, Ga., were adopted without opposition.

At noon the convention adjourned to allow the present and past national officers to take part in a ceremony in Arlington Cemetery when a wreath was placed on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier. A marching unit and members of the local chapter, Su-Zu Court, No. 21, accompanied the officers. Mrs. Roger Craig, of Indianapolis, the grand Oriental guide, or chaplain, made a brief address.

Today officers will be elected. Mrs. Elizabeth Robishaw, of Cleveland, Ohio is slated for the presidency.

Dahlgren Group President, 21, Takes Chair Amid Bickering

John Cahill, 21-year-old president of Dahlgren Terrace Citizens Association, presided over his first meeting last night—a meeting featured by a verbal battle with former President J. H. Williams and the refusal of Secretary J. G. Kingsberry to accept office.

The young man was elected last month after he attacked Williams at the association elections. At the time it was suggested that he be made president to see if he could do as good a job.

The words between president and former president was the outcome of Cahill's appointing Williams a member of the school committee.

Williams bitterly reminded Cahill that only a month before he termed him "as incompetent, lazy and behind times in ideas." Cahill, who looks to be but 18 years old, replied, "Mr. Williams, I take it you decline the job."

"Absolutely," Williams replied.

J. G. Kingsberry, for many years secretary, then stood up to announce he was quitting. Several others were asked to accept the job. All refused, and finally Miss Evelyn Reynolds, youthful appearing secretary, temporarily accepted the office.

The meeting ended after two hours of bickering on parliamentary procedure and before the chair had an opportunity to name chairmen for four committees.

President Cahill, however, managed to name a committee to investigate why Franklin street was not cut through to Rhode Island avenue northeast. Residents of the street were assessed three years ago for the proposed work, which was discontinued at Fifteenth street.

A back-stop for boys playing ball on the Crosby S. Noyes Playground was asked in a letter to school officials.

Room Rented By Post Want Ad Which Cost 72 Cents

Vacant rooms bring no revenue. That's why Miss Mary Clay, of 1901 N St. N.W., doesn't depend on a small two by four sign to rent her room. When she had a vacancy last Sunday, she put this ad in The Post for Monday and Tuesday:

N ST. NW., 1901—Single room, constant hot water; unlimited phone.

By Tuesday, The Post Want Ad brought her a tenant. And all it cost her was 72 cents. Said Miss Clay: "The Post is the only paper in which I list my vacancies—and I get RESULTS every time." Producing RESULTS is an everyday habit with Post Want Ads. They can rent your vacant room, too. Just call

District Republicans, their organization split wide open, yesterday deposited their factional quarrel on the doorstep o fthe party's national committee.

Leo A. Rover, former United States attorney, heads the numerically stronger group, while Edward F. Colladay, lawyer, leads the minority. Rover was elected national committeeman by the majority and Colladay by the minority.

Both factions filed briefs with the secretary of the national committee. Each group claimed to represent the District's Republicans and requested recognition.

Submission of legal arguments signaled the failure of all possibility of a compromise and meant the Cleveland convention will have to decide whether the 55 Rover delegates to the local convention or the 23 Colladay delegates shall prevail.

Both sides seemed confident they would be upheld.

Rover's brief, also signed by Joshua Evans, jr., banker and delegate on the majority ticket, emphasized that 55 delegates voted for the former United States attorney as national committeeman against 23 for Colladay.

The majority brief contended its slate was chosen in a "regular and orderly manner," and argued the credentials committee in the local Republican meeting, which caused the split by unseating Francis Wells, sr., was named in conformance with resolutions drafted and voted for by Colladay.

Rover's faction, the Colladay brief countered, obtained control by "illegally" unseating Wells. The minority denied the majority claim that Wells was not a legal resident of the district from which he was elected.

Another Colladay complaint was that the chairman of the Republican State central committee was permitted to appoint the credentials committee which stripped Wells of his prerogatives when the organization already possessed a standing credentials committee.

G. W. to Begin Clearing Today For New Hall

Building to Be Complete by Fall; Historic Houses to Be Wrecked.

Immediate erection of a new Social Sciences Hall for George Washington University was announced by President Cloyd H. Marvin following a joint meeting yesterday of the executive committee, finance committee and buildings and lands committee of the board of trustees.

Work begins today on demolition of structures on G street and Twentieth street to clear the site for the new building, which is to be ready for occupancy in the fall.

The building will be a modern four-story structure corresponding in style to the new Biological Sciences Building of the university opened last fall, and will occupy the site fronting on G street, east of Lisner Hall. One hundred feet by 78 feet, it will contain 25 classrooms and 32 faculty offices.

The Social Sciences Hall will be the third large building erected by the university within the year. Others include the Hattie M. Strong Residence Hall for Women, now under construction at Twenty-first and G streets, and the Biological Sciences Building.

Part of the university's long-range building program, the building has been hastened because new District of Columbia building regulations would have required structural changes in certain of the old structures in temporary use by the university.

A number of historic homes which the university has acquired with purchases of land will be torn down to make way for the new building. Included are 2005, 2007, 2009, 2011, 2013 and 2015 G street, antd 702 and 704 Twentieth street.

Standards Bureau Roof Fire Wrecks $4,000 Instrument

Bureau of Standards investigations of lighting equipment at airports throughout the Nation were halted at least temporarily yesterday by a fire in a penthouse laboratory on top of the industrial building at the Government's research center on upper Connecticut avenue.

The blaze destroyed a photometer used by bureau scientists in measuring intensities of landing field lights. Dr. J. Franklin Meyer, chief of the photometry section, said the instrument was a very unusual one and valued at about $4,000.

Bureau employes stood by their posts as several companies of firemen clambered up the side of the three-story building on ladders and dragged hose up stairways to reach the flames.

The laboratory, of a light and inexpensive material, was destroyed. Dr. Meyer said the principal difficulty in avoiding an interruption of experiments would be finding another laboratory.

He said he believed the photometer, though unique, could be replaced, "if we can find the money."

Bureau officials said they believed the fire started when a motor controlling automatic operations of the photometer stalled, causing the wiring to burn out.

Firemen confined the damage to the penthouse.

Central High Cadet Corps Wins Top Place in Six-School Drill

While 10,000 students, parents and teachers looked on from Griffith Stadium grandstands, Company B, of Central High School, yesterday afternoon marched out of massed brigade formation to receive first place in the forty-ninth annual competitive drill of the cadet corps of the six high schools in Washington.

Two companies from Western High, K and H, won second and third places.

The victory for Central was the first in five years. The school's rooting section went wild as Brig. Gen. Charles D. Roberts, commander of the Third Corps Area, pinned the Allison Nailer gold medal, highest award for any cadet, on the uniform of Capt. Robert B. Spilman, in command of the winning company.

A silk flag was presented to the company's right guide, Sergt. William Young. Two officers of the victorious company, First Lieut. Harold E. Francis, and Second Lieut. Calvin C. Davis, received sabers.

Commanding officers of the companies which won second and third places, Capt. Joseph Bailey of Company K, and Capt. James R. Leech of Company H, received ribbons. Young Bailey is a grand-nephew of Allison Nailer who gave the medal to the Cadet Corps 41 years ago.

A ribbon was also awarded to Capt. George E. Flather of Company D, of Woodrow Wilson, judged the best of the three companies formed in February.

Capt. George Whitsel, in command of Eastern High's Band, received a lapel button, as did all members of this prize-winning band.

Other awards presented by Gen. Roberts, while Col. Wallace M. Craigie, U. S. A., retired, commandant of the corps, and Dr. Stephen E. Kramer, assistant superintendent of schools, stood by, were a gold medal to Sergt. Albert Merrill, of Company H, of Western, and a silver medal to Sergt. Oliver Atkinson, of Company G, of Roosevelt, judged the best-drilled noncommissioned officers.

Lieut. Jack Dove, of Company D, of McKinley, received a wrist watch for highest score in the Hearst rifle contest in the Third Corps Area.

Following the presentation of the awards, the entire brigade, consisting of 30 companies of approximately 60 men each, passed in review before Gen. Roberts, Col. Cragie, Dr. Kramer, Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools; Mrs. Marion Wade Doyle, president of the Board of Education; Mrs. Philip Sidney Smith, member of the board, and Col. Harry N. Cootes, R. O. T. C. officer of the Third Corps Area.

Judges of the competitive drill were First Lieuts. Howell H. Jordan and Robert H. Chard and Second Lieut. D. Murray Cheston 3d, all from the Thirty-fourth Infantry at Fort George G. Meade.

Yesterday was the third day of drilling. Usually only two are required, but the rain Tuesday morning caused part of the program to be postponed until yesterday afternoon.

Preceding the massed brigade formation and awarding of prizes, six companies went through their paces. They were F of Eastern, A of Central, C of McKinley, G of Western, B of Woodrow Wilson and E of Roosevelt.

Among the spectators was Col. Dan I. Sultan, Engineer Commissioner for the District.

Democrats Set Picnic.

The young Democrats of the District of Columbia will hold a pre-convention picnic and jamboree at Marshall Hall on Saturday. Representative O. D. Wearin, of Iowa, and Miss Vieda Morrow, a Federal attorney, will speak. The party will leave at 10 a. m. on a Wilson Line steamer, and return at 8:30 p. m. Tickets may be obtained from the National Committee headquarters or from the West Virginia headquarters at the Raleigh Hotel.

Schools Gain 1,000 Pupils, Ballou Says

Increase Points to Need of Building Program for District.

Report Shows 91,590 in Classes This Month; Money Needed.

Following the trend predicted by the Board of Education in its five-year building program, Washington public school enrollment has taken another jump.

There are nearly 1,000 more pupils registered this month than there were in May, 1935, Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, informed the board yesterday.

His report showed 91,590 pupils are attending classes now, while the enrollment last May was 90,637.

The junior and senior high schools will graduate 5,831 of these pupils this spring, but basing an estimate on enrollment in under grades 7,160 promoted pupils will enter these branches of the school system next September. Dr. Ballou warned board members they must prepare to accommodate 671 more white pupils and 658 more Negro pupils in high schools next year. These estimates, making a total of 1,329, are exclusive of pupils to come here from outside the city, or from private schools.

Heaviest in Junior High.

The heaviest increase in enrollment this year has been in junior high schools, which have 906 more pupils than a year ago. The senior high schools have 586 more, and the teachers' colleges 26 more. On the other hand there were decreases of 486 in elementary enrollment and 59 in vocational classes.

Unless the board receives money requested of Congress in a deficiency appropriation bill, for bus transportation, school for 81 crippled boys and girls in Washington will end next Wednesday.

Dr. Ballou announced that only $2,140 still is available to transport the physically handicapped children now attending Weightman (white) and Magruder (Negro) schools. This amount will be exhausted May 27.

The board requested additional funds in its deficiency bill. The Budget Bureau fixed the amount at $1,500. The House District Committee subsequently reduced the item to $1,350.

Even if the appropriation bill is passed, and the board gets the amount set by the House committee, the crippled classes will be without transportation at least three days before the end of the term, Dr. Ballou said.

Will Use Funds to End.

"I am not going to assume any responsibility for expenditure of money not already appropriated," the superintendent told the board. "It seems best that we transport all the pupils to school until the funds run out, rather than provide transportation for only a part of them for the rest of the year."

The board supported Dr. Ballou's recommendation that free transportation for the children be discontinued May 27, unless Congress votes the $1,350 before that time.

The board approved the superintendent's plans for opening the vacation classes this year July 1. This will bring the summer term to a close August 11.

Birch Bayh, who 11 months ago received a temporary appointment as director of the department of health and physical education, was appointed permanently to the position yesterday.

After discussing plans for playground activities for this summer the board approved a recommendation of Dr. Ballou that $2,000 be allotted from the appropriation for vacation schools and playgrounds to employ school playground directors and supervisors.

With such an allotment the recreation department would plan to keep school playgrounds open under supervision between 3 p. m. and 7 p. m. on certain days of the week during July and August. The plan of supervision, Dr. Ballou said, will include development of student leaders to take charge of work on individual playgrounds, while supervisors assume responsibility for activities on several lots.

'Show Boat' Is Hailed a Smash Hit at Opening

Capacity Crowds Applaud a Superlative Picture at Keith Premiere.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"SHOW BOAT." Universal picturization of the novel by Edna Ferber and the Ziegfeld stage production, adapted to the screen by Oscar Hammerstein 2d, with book and lyrics by Mr. Hammerstein and music by Jerome Kern, starring Irene Dunne, with Allan Jones, Charles Winninger, Paul Robeson, Helen Morgan, Helen Westley, Sammy White, Queenie Smith, Arthur Hohl, J. Farrell MacDonald, Donald Cook, Sunny O'Dea, Charles Middleton, Clarence Muse, Stanley Fields, Harry Barris and Hattie McDaniel. Directed by James Whale. Reviewed Wednesday night at the RKO-Keith Theater.

Abounding in qualities of infallible audience appeal, alive with the melodious cadences of the Jerome Kern score, cast with sagacious judgment and flawlessly staged and photographed, the long-herald new picturization of "Show Boat" came to the Capital last night to pack RKO-Keith's to the last inch of its capacity and score a triumph such as few pictures have achieved in this or any other season.

"Show Boat" literally has everything essential to overwhelming popular success. Its music has lost none of its tunefulness or romantic charm, its story still amuses, thrills and tugs at the heart, by turns; its comedy is adundant and seems as fresh as when first conceived for the stage by many who now transfer their talents to the cinema; its scope in scene and action has been enhanced beyond even the majestic proportions of the Ziegfeld version and relegates forever to the limbo of forgotten things the feeble earlier effort by the same producing company to bring this imposing work before the cameras and microphones in a fashion of some impressiveness.

Cast Has no Weak Spot.

The cast is one to conjure with. Irene Dunne surpasses everything she has heretofore done for the silver sheet, Charles Winninger has expanded the part of Cap'n. Andy Hawks to the measure of a serio-comic classic, Allan Jones is a handsome and sympathetic Ravenal and Paul Robeson, aided by the roving eye and illimitable flexibility of the camera, makes of "Ol' Man River," that plaintive lamentation of the Mississippi roustabout, one of the minor classics of modern music.

There is no need at this late date in the history of "Show Boat" to recall its picturesque revival of a waning form of dramatic glory in the country's obscure backwaters; of the romance between Magnolia, the ingenuous young daughter of Cap'n Andy Hawks, and Gaylord Ravenal; the tragedy that overtook their lives and the ultimate happiness that sprang from the triumph of their daughter, Kim; of the gay days and the gray days in Chicago's opulent hotels, cheap boarding houses and cheaper honky-tonks—all this is by now part of the legend of the American theater. It remains only to be said here that all of these vital factors in the rounded completeness of a masterpiece of spectacular music-drama are exalted in this magnified new edition to a plane of artistry they never before have been permitted to occupy.

Miss Dunne Surpasses Self.

Miss Dunne's performance in the role of Magnolia is a revelation of versatile talents she never before has chosen to display before the cameras. She sings better than she has ever sung before in a voice of limpid sweetness, purity and power that lends itself to Negro ballads, in blackface, with accompanying "snake-hip" dances, as readily as to the most lilting of the Kern song creations. New numbers have been added to the original score and in both "I've Got My Eye on You" and "The Room Above Her," Miss Dunne shares. The last named affords Allan Jones only one of his many opportunities to demonstrate again that he is one of the musical stage's most accomplished tenors. He also is a competent actor who realizes the full worth of the role of the flashy river gambler.

Helen Morgan, in addition to singing her celebrated numbers, "I Just Can't Keep From Lovin' That Man" and "Bill," acts the role of Julie with a subtle pathos that is genuine and moving. In contrast with this character are Helen Westley's acidulous Parthy and Charles Winninger's inspired Cap'n Andy. The scene in which he enacts all of the parts in a rousing comedy-melodrama is a classic of acrobatic humor. Paul Robeson, Hattie McDaniel and Clarence Muse confer credit upon their race by the superior excellence of their acting as well as singing, and those two comic "artists" of a vaudeville era that is gone, Frank and Elly, are faultlessly impersonated by Sammy White and Queenie Smith.

Spectacular Ensembles.

Added to all this are the gorgeous ensembles of the plantation scene on the stage and the visualization of the burden of the Robeson plaint in "Ol' Man River"—examples of the mobility of the camera for which the stage has neither counterpart nor substitute.

In the rush of setting down these hurried impressions of a memorable screen play, there are no doubt many important considerations that have been wholly overlooked. This is almost inevitable in the case of a picture of such noble proportions and diversified content. I would be much more concerned than I am over the circumstance were I not positive that "Show Boat" will be at Keith's for many weeks to come and that I shall see it many times more—even as you and you and you.

Metropolitan

"DEVIL'S SQUADRON." Columbia picturization of a story by Richard V. Grace, with screen play by Howard J. Green, Bruce Manning and Lionel Houser, starring Richard Dix, supported by Karen Morley, Lloyd Nolan, Shirley Ross, Henry Mollison, Gene Morgan, Gertrude Green, Gordon Jones and Thurston Hall. Directed by Erle C. Kenton. Reviewed Wednesday afternoon by W. A. Whitney.

With much of the thrilling suspense that characterized the stage and screen versions of Frank Wead's "Ceiling Zero," yet generously supplied with lighter moments, "Devil's Squadron" zoomed across the screen of the Metropolitan Theater yesterday a highly entertaining and diverting offering which just misses being truly great.

Offered as the saga of test pilots, in tribute to these unsung heroes of aeronautical manufacturing trades, "Devil's Squadron" presents more of story and less of honor, the peace-time aces shining more in the reflected glory of their profession than in expounding its reasons for distinction.

Yet, withal, the story of the vicissitudes of speed-plane building and testing—with an eye to the military utilization of the product—and of how pilot after pilot lays down his life that the ship may be perfected, is thrilling and engrossing. With death and destruction in quantity to satiate the most morbid taste, there has been added to the narrative a decided comedy angle which not only serves to assuage the awfulness of the test flights but to offer as well an angle almost as engaging as the main theme.

One-at-a-Time Story.

One particular point of story technique stands out: the one-character-at-a-time form of writing. In other words, here is a story whose developments are made through the work of single individuals, while the others involved unobtrusively move about until their turn comes around. So it is especially with Richard Dix. We see him almost continually from the opening to the closing shots, but for the first two-thirds of the picture he has little to do save pass a comment from time to time.

But when he really does go to work—to make the climactic test flight—Mr. Dix comes through with as fine a job as he has ever done in a picture of less than epic proportions. In a scene strikingly reminiscent of the closing ones in "Ceiling Zero"—preceded by one which might be a Beau Gestian Viking funeral brought up to date—he makes a "9-G test" (leveling out after a 10,000-foot power drive) in the face of almost certain—and sudden—death. But, thanks to the lessons learned from earlier and fatal flights, the test is successful, and all the threatened tragedy is averted, and everything ends happily.

Realistic Support.

While Karen Morley is the charming love interest, which never seems to obtrude upon the starker aspects of the story, the real support offered Mr. Dix is that given by Boyd Irwin, as the airport owner killed in a test flight; Gordon Jones, as a pilot, victim of a fatal crash, and Henry Mollison as another, crippled for life. Excellent in their portrayal of the technical phases of the picture, while smoothly performing the incidental episodes, these three, with Mr. Dix, make an incomparable quartet.

The comedy of the piece lies largely in the lines and action passed between Gene Morgan, yet another pilot (whose testimony finally clears the hero), and Gertrude Green, as Lulu, whose comportment can best be described by accentuating the name. Others in the cast include William Stelling, Shirley Ross, Billy Burrud and Cora Sue Collins.

Topping the short-subject parade in "The Pinch Singer," an excruciatingly funny Our Gang comedy, wherein "Alfalfa" is forced into the titular situation—and wins the $50 prize. "Fish Tales" is an amusing Looney Tune, and the combined releases of the Paramount and Universal newsreels round out a satisfying program.

About The Showshops

IN a gesture of generosity toward the faithful of the playhouse who have felt that New York City was a little too far away for their casual theatergoing, Mr. Ray Henderson wishes it known that Miss Katharine Cornell, the usual object of his eloquence, will appear in the Forrest Theater, Philadelphia, Pa., in the title role of her production of George Bernard Shaw's "Saint Joan" for one week only, beginning on Monday night, June 1.

NELSON B. BELL.

Guthrie McClintic, producer of "Winterset" and in private life Miss Cornell's husband and the director of all her plays, staged "Saint Joan." The settings and costumes were designed by Jo Mielziner, the current theater's undisputed master of effective scenic investiture. The matinee performances in Philadelphia will begin promptly at 2:15 p. m. and the night at 8:15. No one will be seated during the first scene of the play, which consumes 18 minutes. The original Broadway cast, including Arthur Byron, Maurice Evans, Charles Waldron, Eduardo Ciannelli and George Coulouris, will be seen in the star's support. Mail orders now are being filled, if accompanied by self-addressed, stamped envelope and proper remittance.

During her 7,000-mile tour in "Saint Joan," Miss Cornell will be seen only in Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago, Los Angeles and San Francisco. It is, of course, a keen disappointment that Washington is omitted from this brief itinerary. One suspects that in playing Philadelphia, Miss Cornell feels that she is meeting the Capital half way. Wilmington would be nearer it!

At the preview screening of "One Rainy Afternoon," on Tuesday's comparatively clear one, the drayma desks were given a few moments' serious and silent reflection by the screen "trailer" which will be utilized by theaters throughout the Nation in a week's intensive drive on behalf of the Will Rogers Memorial. With Lowell Thomas as spokesman, this fine tribute to the memory of a beloved comedian also enlists the participation of Bing Crosby, singing Rogers' favorite song, "Home on the Range;" Shirley Temple, who unveils a plaque; Irvin S. Cobb, who eulogizes his former friend and associate, and a group of leaders of the motion picture industry who stand in respectful silence as the tiny Miss Temple pulls the string disclosing the bronze of her former favorite star. Through somebody's good judgment, the voice of Bing Crosby will continue from the screen throughout the collection period that will be devoted to bolstering the Memorial fund.

When you see George Hassell on the screen in support of Grace Moore and Franchot Tone in "The King Steps Out," at the Earle tomorrow, you will require a closeup, or, at least, a second look to recognize him. Formerly one of the Gargantuas of the theater, the pompous and prodigious Mr. Hassell seems to have lost somewhere in the neighborhood of 100 pounds.

William Holbrook is working miracles with the principals and chorus of the Young Democrats Club of Washington production of "Kapital Kapers," to be seen at the National following the engagement of Henry Hull in "Tobacco Road." Miss Helen Shafer Mark, one of Washington's better mezzos, is the prima donna of the revue.

Too bad the circus could not have played here Tuesday and Wednesday, instead of Monday and Tuesday, the tragic days of the big wind and bigger rain.

"The Nightingale Flies Home," by Rupert Hughes, has been purchased by Columbia as the next production for Grace Moore. She is in Europe at the moment, unwittingly slighting kings and thereby receiving flowers instead of medals.

The Women's International League has been added to the list of sponsors of the reading of Irwin Shaw's play of "Bury the Dead," to be presented by the New Theater of Washington on Wednesday night, June 3, in Pierce Hall. The reading will be by members of the New Theater's New York acting group, some of whom appeared in the New York production of the play. A general discussion will follow.

The Roadside Players have been busy on that old red barn—which is practically new and not red—against the opening of their season, with "Around the World in 80 Days," on June 15. A new workshop has been tacked onto the south side of the structure and various improvements made in the interior of the "auditorium proper," as the saying goes.

Efforts are being made to secure John Boles for a week's engagement at the Century Theater in Baltimore, beginning Friday, May 29. If the booking is made, Mr. Boles will spend the intervening week rusticating with friends up in the Blue Ridge.

Marty Collins and Harry Peterson, on the current stage bill at the Fox, are having a swell time in Washington, as usual, and wish to be remembered to Ed Sullivan, The Post's Broadway columnist. Hi, Ed?

Look-Out-There's-a-Lady-Over-There Note.

Marty Collins has a new story he's not using on the stage. I'll be seeing you down back of the barn!

One-Act Plays

The Georgetown Players present two one-act plays under the direction of Lucille Bartram Fisher. In Cissel Chapel, May 20.

Two one-act plays and a musical interlude were offered by the Georgetown Players last evening in Cissel chapel.

Opening the evening's festivities was W. R. Walker's "A Pair of Lunatics," with Theodore Field and Lucy Allen, as Capt. George Fielding and Clara Manners, two guests at a party held in an insane asylum. Both are, of course, quite normal, but there are grave doubts in the mind of each as to the sanity of the other.

The second play was "The White Phantom," by Wilbur White, which tells of efforts to oust unwanted tenants. A nicely turned bit of love interest threads the mystery, and there is the usual "dumb cop" and a mother rather irked by her daughter's choice.

As a musical interlude Eleanor Hulburt offered selections on the accordion and joined with Irvin Chilcoat in several piano duets.

'Tobacco Road' Extends Visit Another Week

Henry Hull, as Jeeter, to Compete With Week's Ace Screen Bills.

Announcement was made yesterday that "Tobacco Road," with Henry Hull in his original role of Jeeter Lester, now playing a return engagement at the National Theater, will be held over for a second week at popular prices. This will fill in the date first assigned to "The Old Maid," canceled as a result of the operation of the District's ill-judged child labor law. Supporting Mr. Hull in "Tobacco Road" is an able cast, led by Mary Servoss, Donald Barry, Leon Ames, Priscilla Knowles and Haila Stoddard.

Grace Moore's latest starring vehicle for Columbia, "The King Steps Out," will be the screen attraction at the Earle Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. The role of the king in this tuneful Viennese operetta, with music by Fritz Kreisler, is played by Franchot Tone in his best manner. The supporting cast includes, among others, Walter Connolly, Raymond Walburn, Victor Jory, Elisabeth Risdon, Thurston Hall, Nana Bryant, Herman Bing and Frieda Inescourt. The stage will be headlined by the Radio City Music Hall Glee Club. Other acts will be presented by Freddie Dosh and Saul Gauman & Co.

Francis Lederer and Ida Lupino are the romantic stars of "One Rainy Afternoon," the gay Parisian farce, which comes to the screen at Loew's Fox Theater tomorrow as major feature of the film portion of the new week's entertainment. They are supported by a notable cast of comics, headed by Hugh Herbert, Ronald Young, Richard Carle, Countess Liev de Maigret, Donald Meek and Joseph Cawthorn. Music interludes occur throughout the spirited action. The vaudeville bill will be headlined by that dynamic young vocalist, Gertrude Niesen, singer par excellence. Others on the stage program will include Sammy Lewis and Patti Moore, just back from Europe.

"Champagne Charlie" is the title of the effervescent comedy announced as the chief screen feature at the Columbia Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. Paul Cavanagh and Helen Wood are the fetaured members of the cast, supported by Minna Gombell, Herbert Mundin, Montagu Love, Thomas Beck and Noel Madison. As an added attraction, the Columbia will bring back "It Happened in Washington," the two-reel comedy-drama made with a cast of local high school students and sponsored by the Loew theaters and The Washington Post.

With crowds still flocking to see the Czechoslovakian production of "Ecstasy," European prize-winner as the best picture of its year, this unique bit of cinematic symbolism continues its triumphant course at the Belasco Theater. The stellar role is played by Hedy Kiesler. It is probable that "Ecstasy" will continue through a fifth consecutive week on Lafayette Square, beginning Saturday. It will be succeeded, eventually, by Jan Kiepura and Gladys Swarthout in "Give Us This Night."

Janet Gaynor and Robert Taylor, having caught the public fancy by the spontaneity and charm of their work in the costellar roles of "Small Town Girl," will continue for a second week at the Palace in that cleverly contrived screen romance of a village belle and a rising young city surgeon. Lewis S. Stone, Charles Grapewin, Nella Walker, Frank Craven, Elizabeth Patterson and Andy Devine lead the support. The supplementary features also will be continued.

Leslie Howard and Bette Davis, in "Of Human Bondage," will continue the attraction at the Little Theater throughout the remainder of the current week. On Sunday this splendid picturization of the W. Somerset Maugham story will be succeeded on the screen by a revival of "The Lives of a Bengal Lancer," with Gary Cooper, Franchot Tone, Richard Cromwell and Sir Guy Standing.

With the slow advance of seasonable temperatures, Glen Echo Park, the Capital's free-admission amusement center in the open, is beginning to feel the surge of midsummer crowds of pleasure seekers. All of the 50-odd amusement devices, including the Spanish Garden ballroom and all of the rides, are in full operation. The Crystal Pool is scheduled to open for the summer on Wednesday, May 27.

Down at Seaside Park, on the bay at Chesapeake Beach, Md., George Vass and His Ramblers are providing snappy "swing" music and an occasional sedate waltz for dancers in the large pavilion. Boating, fishing from the half-mile pier, picnic groves and myriad other amusements in midseason operation. On Friday, May 29—in time for the Memorial Day crowds—the salt-water bathing pool will be opened for the summer.

Mme. Gurle Luise Correa, director of the Washington Opera Guild, announces that this group will present a benefit program of scenes from famous operas, sung by members of the guild in appropriate costumes, in the ballroom of the Willard next Monday night, May 25, at 8:30 o'clock. The singers will be assisted by the distinguished young pianist, Josef Levine.

Columbians

"THE SHINING HOUR." The Columbia Players present the drama in three acts and four scenes by Keith Winter, directed by Dorothea Lewis, with stage setting by Jane Lasater Rubey and lighting and technical effects by Anthony F. Merrill. At Pierce Hall, May 20 and 21. Reviewed Wednesday evening by W. A. Whitney.

THE CAST.

Judy Linden.....Bunnie Skinner
Hannah Linden.....Yvonne Kushner
Henry Linden.....Walter Bucher
Micky Linden.....Charles Grunwell
Mariella Linden.....Eileen Fowler
David Linden.....Arthur Westover

Combating the handicap of a play top-heavy with words and peopled with characters of not too strong definition, the Columbia Players last evening suffered slightly from authorial deficiencies, the while fighting every line of the way to make this production of Keith Winters "The Shining Hour" the credit it should be to all concerned, especially as it is not only a "first time" in Washington, but also the players' closing offering for the 1935-1936 season.

The cast of six, for the most part, did nobly, and the direction of Dorothea Lewis gave considerable more authenticity to the drama than might have been adduced merely by the lines.

The tragidrama concerns the Linden family—they are all Lindens, three brothers and a spinster sister—and what happens when the oldest brother returns home with wife No. 2 to stay pending the construction of his new home. The wife is young and charming, and the middle brother falls in love with her, his own wife conducting her own private suttee that he may be happy. All the time big sister, frank, at times acidulous, seems to sense some malign influence in the new arrival's presence. And the whole thing terminates with wife finally deciding to leave for a divorce and marry the widower.

Miss Kushner Scores.

Yvonne Kushner did a grand piece of work as the spinster sister, furnishing quite the most consistently convincing interpretation of the evening, and this part was none too clearly limned by the author.

The self-effacing wife was played by Bunnie Skinner, with Eileen Fowler making the complications in what apparently once had been domestic felicity. Arthur Westover led his confreres, as the Don Juanish widower-to-be, with Walter Bucher the unimaginative husband and Charles Grunwell the youngest brother.

Plays Daredevil of the Clouds

Having been long absent from the local screen, Richard Dix returns to view this week at the Metropolitan as star of Columbia Pictures' production of "Devil's Squadron," a pictorial tribute to the courage of the test fliers and "stunt" men of the air, written by Dick Grace, famous aviator. Karen Morley appears in the principal feminine role, as will be learned from other columns of today's Post, in which yesterday's opening of this feature is reviewed.

Some months ago, I heard from him again . . . A short, timid invitation to drop over and hear him sing at the Chesapeake House . . . To my amazement, he was in better voice than ever before, and when he returned to the table I proposed a toast to his comeback . . . "I'll take milk, Ed," he said . . . "Haven't touched a drop of liquor in a long, long time. Got myself a new voice teacher, and if I get a break, I'll be back on top again" . . . The courage of this fellow, who had stood up gamely under a seven-year drubbing, was magnificent . . . A few weeks later he got his break—at the Paradise . . . He's been stopping shows ever since, and when he sings the old, remembered songs, girls in the audience pull out their tiny lace handkerchiefs and dab at their eyes, for this is a "Water Under the Bridge" chapter come to life . . . The answer is that talent can't be denied . . . Flo Ziegfeld would have been pleased at "The Great Ziegfeld" . . . I think he would have been even more pleased to learn that John Steel had crashed back into the ranks of the headliners, for Steel was one of his pets, and he often talked of him.

Marguerite Sylva, Met star, was operated upon a few hours ago at St. Luke's . . . She was badly injured in a crash while automobiling with Senator Craven's family . . . Peggy Fears is dickering for a night club warbling contract . . . Courtney Riley Cooper, visiting J. Edgar Hoover with N. T. Granlund, was indignant at Hoover's comparatively slender pay check . . . He offered Hoover half of his G-Men magazine articles . . . J. Edgar turned this down, just as he's turned down all similar offers.

Those of you who are handicapped can take heart from the example of one Bob Christenberry, who lost an arm with the famous Fifth Marines . . . He is the energetic new manager at the Hotel Astor, and since he took charge last October he has changed that famous Broadway landmark into the most distinctive of Stem spots . . . Under the persuasion of his energy, bankers broke down and allotted him close $400,000 for improvements . . . Christenberry is a Floridian, worked as a newspaperman in Washington, D. C., managed hotels in Pittsburgh . . . He says that newspapermen, instead of turning to fiction writing, should turn to hotel management, that their training is the ideal preparation for the hotel business . . . He believes that the loss of an arm or a leg is a help rather than a handicap, points out that he is easily remembered because he is the only one-armed hotel manager.

Prediction: Joe Louis will flatten Max Schmeling in any round he decides upon . . . Only place in town where they still play country-type games is Jay C. Flippen's apartment . . . You bend down and try to pick up a chair with your head against the wall; they tie you into knots and you've got to untangle them . . . And Claire Carter has one trick, where four people lift a fifth high into the air, supporting him only on their fingertips, that is more fun than a cage of monkeys . . . Standard Oil Tycoon Bob Hague has the most absorbing apartment in town, with ship models and watches of every description . . . Whatever became of Hope Williams?

Marion Miley Out in Golf Tourney

Miss Newell Completes Rout of American Cup Players.

Victor, Miss Barton Play Today for English Women's Title.

By the Associated Press.

Southport, England, May 20.—Another American assault on the British Women's golf championship became only a memory today as a pair of long-hitting British girls, Bridget Newell and Pam Barton, fought their way through to the 36-hole final, which will be played over the Southport and Ainsdale course tomorrow.

Miss Newell climaxed one of the most disastrous routs ever administered an American team in recent years when she beat the last American survivor, Marion Miley, of Lexington, Ky., 4 and 3, in the fourth round. Not even the most optimistic of the British critics could have foreseen last Monday an all-British semifinal round such as was waged this afternoon.

While Miss Newell was beating the American, this morning, Kathleen Garnham put out Mrs. Edith Rhodes, 4 and 3; Molly Gourlay eliminated Jean Hamilton, 1 up, and Miss Barton defeated Dorritt Wilkins, 3 and 2.

In the afternoon, Miss Barton, now a finalist for the third straight year, defeated Miss Garnham, 5 and 4, and Miss Newell beat Miss Gourley, 3 and 2.

Miss Barton probably played the greatest competitive match-play rounds of the tournament in winning today When she did lose a hole she lost it by a good margin, but she had five birdies in the morning against Miss Wilkins, and three more in the afternoon.

Because of this superlative performance, Miss Barton was a slight favorite to win the title tomorrow, but Miss Newell's performance during the whole week has been so notable that the critics are beginning to believe she can do anything. First, she won the medal, breaking the woman's competitive course record with a 74 to do so. Then in order she defeated the defending champion, Wanda Morgan, the 1930 champion, Diana Fishwick, Mrs. H. V. Newton, Miss Miley and the veteran, Miss Gourlay.

Roy Parmelee Driven to Showers as Cards Are Defeated.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 20.—Driving their former teammate, Leroy Parmelee, from the mound, the New York Giants chalked up their ninth straight victory and took over the National League lead from St. Louis today as they defeated the Cardinals, 10 to 7. The victory was the Giants' thirteenth success in 14 home games.

Parmelee, who had beaten the Giants and Carl Hubbell in 17 innings at St. Louis, was forced to abdicate during the fifth inning when the Giants put across four runs, with Mel Ott hitting his seventh homer.

Eight Ringmen Win Olympic Positions

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 20.—Uncle Sam's team of fighters to carry the Stars and Stripes into the ring in the Olympic games at Berlin next August, fought it out for first and second places in the United States team tonight before a cheering crowd of 19,152 spectators in the Chicago Stadium.

The eight newly crowned champions are, 112-pound class, Louis Laurie, Cleveland; 118 pounds, Jackie Wilson, Cleveland; 126 pounds, Ted Kara, Cleveland; 136 pounds, Andy Scrivani, Chicago; 147 pounds, Howell King, Detroit; 160 pounds, Jimmy Clark, Jamestown, N. Y.; 175 pounds, Carl Vinciquerra, Omaha; heavyweight, Arthur Oliver, Chicago.

The alternates, who also will make the trip to Berlin, fighting in case of injury to the title holders, were the losers of tonight's battles.

The receipts of tonight's contests were $33,124, which will go to the American Olympic fund to defray the expenses of the boxers for their trip across the Atlantic.

Post Toasties, E Street Champions, in Debut

So crisp they expect to make a crackling good debut, and armed with a brand new baseball (price $1.25, including 15 per cent discount) The Post Toasties, alias the E Street Starlings, will invade Brookland this morning to do battle with the Michigan Avenue Home for Aged, alias a group of Cath'ic University coaches, promptly at 11 o'clock. The sport, incidentally, is baseball.

If the Toasties see their shadows the game will be postponed because of inclement weather. They will be without the services of one or two regulars who are suffering from exposure to fresh air, but should present a strong line-up. Among those expected for the rites are "Sugar-Daddy Dulaney, "Squirrel" Donaldson, "Jumping John" Riseling, "Two-Bob" Whitney, "Just-Call-Me-Mr." McCormick and a flock of guys called, "Boy."

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

Cleveland, Ohio, May 20.

Master Buddy Lewis, if he can read, is finding himself something of a celebrity as the Washington ball club swings through the West. If he can't read, perchance, he should be realizing anyway that quite a fuss is being made over him in this end of the American League.

The 19-year-old kid who is proving such a potent package as Washington's third baseman, with his .365 batting average and his masterful play in the field, is now being bracketed with the Yankees' Joe DiMaggio as the prize rookie of the 1936 season.

POVICH.

"How about this kid, Lewis?" is the first question that local baseball scriveners in every Western city are popping at Manager Bucky Harris.

"Which one is Buddy Lewis?" hotel clerks whisper furtively as the Nats check in at the different hostelries.

"Are you Buddy Lewis?" the young autograph hounds ask in bright-eyed hope as they approach each new and unfamiliar face with book and pencil in hand.

"Box car headlines and lengthy pieces in the papers and close up pictures hail young John Kelly Lewis as the new sensation on the Washington club which specializes in picking up swell young infielders. The names of such as Bucky Harris, Buddy Myer, Ossie Bluege, Joe Cronin and Cecil Travis are reeled off and now, as they say, along comes Buddy Lewis.

He is indeed, just a kid. Buck Newsom gave the best seven word description of the lad when he said: "He looks like Cecil Travis' baby brother." And Travis, you remember, is only 22. The resemblance is, indeed, marked. Like Travis, Buddy Lewis is tall, apparently frail, a bit knock-kneed and truly boyish looking. Travis is a dead ringer for an immature college freshman, but Lewis looks for all the world as if he had just escaped from some prep school.

How does all this fame and publicity strike young John Kelly Lewis? This department was interested to the extent that it upped and asked young John Kelly Lewis:

He didn't stop to think. At his age, I guess, none of us pondered the advisability of making a profound statement. Just as naturally as a kid would reach for candy, he lighted up, smiled and said:

"Gee, ain't it great?"

It must be great to a kid who's wanted to be a big leaguer ever since he was big enough to lift a drug store bat. That is Buddy Lewis' confession.

"But all this seems awful sudden to me," he went on. "Sometimes I get a little bit scared. I never dreamed of being a big star like they think I'm gonna be. I just wanted to play baseball in the big leagues. If people begin to expect too much of me, I think it's gonna be awful tough on me. But I ain't gonna stop tryin'."

And what did young Master Lewis think was his biggest thrill in the big leagues so far? This department was surprised, too.

"Well, I guess the biggest kick I've gotten out of this Western trip is going into these ball parks. I used to listen to the games on the radio and I had my own ideas of what the parks looked like, but I was still awful curious. I just liked to see the places where all these teams were playing and get a look at where the fences were. Of course, I was most interested in where the rightfield fences were."

That his new found success, fame and publicity have not spoiled Buddy Lewis is as apparent as the proboscis on this department's face.

"I guess I'm the luckiest fellow who ever broke into baseball," confessed Lewis. "When Chattanooga picked me up, they didn't have any third baseman and I just walked into the job. When Bucky Harris called me to Washington, they didn't have any regular third baseman either and the gate was wide open. If I'd a-come up with a team that didn't particularly need a third baseman, maybe I'd never a-got a chance."

"Golly, that's easy. No fellow ever had the luck I did. No rookie ever had a teacher like Ossie Bluege. He taught me more about playing third base in one afternoon than I learned in a whole season at Chattanooga. It's not what he tells you, exactly, but how he teaches you."

Lindstrom to Resume Career Next Year If He Gets in Shape

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 20.—Freddie Lindstrom isn't through with baseball. He hopes to resume his career as a player next year, if his condition permits.

The 30-year-old Chicagoan, whose sudden decision to quit the Brooklyn Dodgers came as a shocking surprise to baseball fans, made known his plans when he returned today. He intends to take his family to a summer camp on a lake near Minocqua, Wis., and spend the balance of the year fishing, hunting and roughing it.

"If I feel next winter that I'm in shape to play my best once more," Lindstrom explained, "I'll return to the Dodgers, or to any club that wants me as a player. But if I don't feel I'm in shape I'll hang up my baseball stuff for good."

Lindstrom offered a surprising explanation for his decision to be placed in voluntary retirement by declaring that he was unable to give value received for the money paid him.

Said Freddie:

"I simply hated the thought of taking money when I was unable to give anything in return. That's why I quit. For the last four years I have been a victim of injuries. As I sat on the bench, unable to play, the thought of not being able to earn my salary depressed me.

"The Brooklyn club was nice to me, but I didn't want to take the money if I couldn't be of any help. That's why I quit."

Lindstrom, still a young man, has preserved himself by careful and temperate living. He has saved his money and does not have to worry about a job for the present. If his campaign to restore himself to playing condition fails, he plans to enter business with friends in Chicago.

$300,000 Bid Braddock For Bout

Promoters Make Offer for 15-Round Fight With Haynes.

Negro Must First Beat Carnera; Would Be in Philadelphia.

By the United Press.

Philadelphia, May 20.—James J. Braddock, world heavyweight boxing champion, today was offered $300,000 to defend his title against Leroy Haynes, Philadelphia Negro, in a 15-round bout here this summer.

In announcing the offer, which was sent to Joe Gould, manager of Braddock, Promoters Taylor and Gunnis said the date of the bout had been placed entirely at the option of Braddock, dependent upon his acceptance of the bid.

The match would be held in the municipal stadium, where Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney staged their first encounter in 1926.

There was one stipulation in the offer, however. The promoters said Haynes first must defeat Primo Carnera, the former champion, in their return bout at Brooklyn, May 27, before he can receive consideration for the proposed match with Braddock.

New York, May 20.—Jimmy Braddock, world heavyweight champion, is not ignoring the $300,000 guarantee offer to fight in Philadelphia this summer, but is holding up a decision until the heavyweight atmosphere is cleared by forthcoming bouts, Manager Joe Gould said tonight.

Steele, Overlin Bout Sought For District

By Bill McCormick.

Another police benefit boxing card, headed by a bout of national importance, is in prospect for Washington this summer if tentative plans are carried out. Freddie Steele, the sensational middleweight from the Pacific Coast, will meet Ken Overlin, ranked fourth nationally, if the plan is carried out.

Steele probably will be champion of the middleweight division by the time the bout—probably to be held in September—takes place. He is fighting Babe Risko for the 165-pound crown in July and will rule an overwhelming favorite to lift the bauble from the present titleholder, whom he recently trounced very soundly in an overweight engagement.

Pete Reilly, well-known international figure in the fight game, has control, or enough control of Steele, to bring him here. Reilly managed Freddie Miller, who dropped his featherweight crown to Pete Sarron in the recent police benefit card at Griffith Stadium.

Reilly Impressed.

The gate of $32,000 greatly impressed Reilly, who received a flat guarantee of $10,000 for Miller's services. Immediately after the bout he declared Washington was one of the best fight towns in the country and the conduct of bouts here very good, even though he did lose the title.

Before leaving, he agreed to allow Battling Battalino, former featherweight title-holder who now cuts a wide swath in the lightweight ranks, to fight Howard Scott and tentatively agreed to book Wesley Ramey, second-ranking lightweight, here sometime in the summer. He also, of course, tacitly agreed to the Steele-Overlin bout for some date after the Pacific Coast knockerout wins the title.

Reilly's recommendation and acceptance of the Capital as a good fight spot has done much to simplify the task of local matchmakers. Goldie Ahearn was able to reach an agreement with the managers of Welterweight Champion Barney Ross soon after the Sarron-Miller engagement and other good fighters as readily agreed to show here.

Nats Defeat Indians, 7-6; Ending Streak

By Shirley Povich.

Sports Editor of The Post.

Ceveland, May 20.—The Nats staggered uncertainly toward victory this afternoon and finally made it by the squeaky figures of 7 to 6 when Jimmy DeShong, who for five innings had been an incorrigibly wasteful performer on the pitching mound, reformed with great suddenness.

DeShong had been given a variety of leads in those early innings when the Indians trailed the Nats at various points by scores of 1-0, 4-1 and 5-3, but by the end of the fifth DeShong was trying to pitch his way out of a 6-6 deadlock.

But with the score tied, the 5,000 Cleveland partisans in the ball park were prematurely gay. It developed from that fifth inning until the finish DeShong was superb. He yielded but one more hit, a single in the sixth, and in the last three innings he yielded no hits at all.

Lewis' Running Helps.

It was a rare piece of base running by Buddy Lewis, combined with a rare piece of good luck, that permitted the Nats to score the winning run back in the sixth inning. Lewis smashed a single into rightfield with one out to get on base and began a wild dash when Powell singled into leftfield.

Gambling on his speed, Lewis rounded second and raced for third despite Galatzer's pickup of the ball in short left field. He slid safely into the bag ahead of the throw in a cloud of dust and when the ball bounded off his ankle into the Washington dugout, Lewis scrambled up and raced home on the play, which was scored as an error for Galatzer.

Four Washington errors behind DeShong were no help to the right-hander in those early innings when he was permitting the Indians nine of their ten hits. And three Cleveland errors behind the left-handed Thorton Lee combined to make it a very loosely played ball game indeed.

Lloyd Brown was the final victim as the Nats brought their three-game losing streak to a halt and expanded Cleveland's current losing

Rowe Victor Over Ruffing as Each Yields But Six Safeties.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, May 20.—Marvin Owen's home run, his only hit of the game, broke up a hurling duel between Schoolboy Rowe and Red Ruffing and gave the Detroit Tigers a 4-to-3 victory over the New York Yankees in ten innings today.

Owen's home run gave Rowe an edge in a game in which each pitcher allowed six hits and walked three. Rowe fanned ten Yankees, however, in registering his fourth victory of the season.

Browns Score 3d Straight Victory

Defeat Red Sox, 12-8, on 9 Hits; Solters Is Star at Bat.

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, May 20.—The St. Louis Browns slapped down the highly touted Boston Red Sox today, 12 to 8, garnering the dozen runs from only nine hits, but profiting by nine bases on balls.

One of Boston's nine hits was Jimmy Foxx's ninth home run of the year. Boston used six pitchers. It was the Browns' third consecutive victory, a winning streak especially pleasing to a team which recently lost 13 in a row.

Julius Solters led the Browns' attack with three hits, including a triple, in five times at bat, and drove in five

Capacity Crowds Applaud a Superlative Picture at Keith Premiere.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"SHOW BOAT." Universal picturization of the novel by Edna Ferber and the Ziegfeld stage production, adapted to the screen by Oscar Hammerstein 2d, with book and lyrics by Mr. Hammerstein and music by Jerome Kern, starring Irene Dunne, with Allan Jones, Charles Winninger, Paul Robeson, Helen Morgan, Helen Westley, Sammy White, Queenie Smith, Arthur Hohl, J. Farrell MacDonald, Donald Cook, Sunny O'Dea, Charles Middleton, Clarence Muse, Stanley Fields, Harry Barris and Hattie McDaniel. Directed by James Whale. Reviewed Wednesday night at the RKO-Keith Theater.

Abounding in qualities of infallible audience appeal, alive with the melodious cadences of the Jerome Kern score, cast with sagacious judgment and flawlessly staged and photographed, the long-herald new picturization of "Show Boat" came to the Capital last night to pack RKO-Keith's to the last inch of its capacity and score a triumph such as few pictures have achieved in this or any other season.

"Show Boat" literally has everything essential to overwhelming popular success. Its music has lost none of its tunefulness or romantic charm, its story still amuses, thrills and tugs at the heart, by turns; its comedy is adundant and seems as fresh as when first conceived for the stage by many who now transfer their talents to the cinema; its scope in scene and action has been enhanced beyond even the majestic proportions of the Ziegfeld version and relegates forever to the limbo of forgotten things the feeble earlier effort by the same producing company to bring this imposing work before the cameras and microphones in a fashion of some impressiveness.

Cast Has no Weak Spot.

The cast is one to conjure with. Irene Dunne surpasses everything she has heretofore done for the silver sheet, Charles Winninger has expanded the part of Cap'n. Andy Hawks to the measure of a serio-comic classic, Allan Jones is a handsome and sympathetic Ravenal and Paul Robeson, aided by the roving eye and illimitable flexibility of the camera, makes of "Ol' Man River," that plaintive lamentation of the Mississippi roustabout, one of the minor classics of modern music.

There is no need at this late date in the history of "Show Boat" to recall its picturesque revival of a waning form of dramatic glory in the country's obscure backwaters; of the romance between Magnolia, the ingenuous young daughter of Cap'n Andy Hawks, and Gaylord Ravenal; the tragedy that overtook their lives and the ultimate happiness that sprang from the triumph of their daughter, Kim; of the gay days and the gray days in Chicago's opulent hotels, cheap boarding houses and cheaper honky-tonks—all this is by now part of the legend of the American theater. It remains only to be said here that all of these vital factors in the rounded completeness of a masterpiece of spectacular music-drama are exalted in this magnified new edition to a plane of artistry they never before have been permitted to occupy.

Miss Dunne Surpasses Self.

Miss Dunne's performance in the role of Magnolia is a revelation of versatile talents she never before has chosen to display before the cameras. She sings better than she has ever sung before in a voice of limpid sweetness, purity and power that lends itself to Negro ballads, in blackface, with accompanying "snake-hip" dances, as readily as to the most lilting of the Kern song creations. New numbers have been added to the original score and in both "I've Got My Eye on You" and "The Room Above Her," Miss Dunne shares. The last named affords Allan Jones only one of his many opportunities to demonstrate again that he is one of the musical stage's most accomplished tenors. He also is a competent actor who realizes the full worth of the role of the dashy river gambler.

Helen Morgan, in addition to singing her celebrated numbers, "I Just Can't Keep From Lovin' That Man" and "Bill," acts the role of Julie with a subtle pathos that is genuine and moving. In contrast with this character are Helen Westley's acidulous Parthy and Charles Winninger's inspired Cap'n Andy. The scene in which he enacts all of the parts in a rousing comedy-melodrama is a classic of acrobatic humor. Paul Robeson, Hattie McDaniel and Clarence Muse confer credit upon their race by the superior excellence of their acting as well as singing, and those two comic "artists" of a vaudeville era that is gone, Frank and Elly, are faultlessly impersonated by Sammy White and Queenie Smith.

Spectacular Ensembles.

Added to all this are the gorgeous ensembles of the plantation scene on the stage and the visualization of the burden of the Robeson plaint in "Ol' Man River"—examples of the mobility of the camera for which the stage has neither counterpart nor substitute.

In the rush of setting down these hurried impressions of a memorable screen play, there are no doubt many important considerations that have been wholly overlooked. This is almost inevitable in the case of a picture of such noble proportions and diversified content. I would be much more concerned than I am over the circumstance were I not positive that "Show Boat" will be at Keith's for many weeks to come and that I shall see it many times more—even as you and you and you.

Metropolitan

"DEVIL'S SQUADRON." Columbia picturization of a story by Richard V. Grace, with screen play by Howard J. Green, Bruce Manning and Lionel Houser, starring Richard Dix, supported by Karen Morley, Lloyd Nolan, Shirley Ross, Henry Mollison, Gene Morgan, Gertrude Green, Gordon Jones and Thurston Hall. Directed by Erle C. Kenton. Reviewed Wednesday afternoon by W. A. Whitney.

With much of the thrilling suspense that characterized the stage and screen versions of Frank Wead's "Ceiling Zero," yet generously supplied with lighter moments, "Devil's Squadron" zoomed across the screen of the Metropolitan Theater yesterday a highly entertaining and diverting offering which just misses being truly great.

Offered as the saga of test pilots, in tribute to these unsung heroes of aeronautical manufacturing trades, "Devil's Squadron" presents more of story and less of honor, the peace-time aces shining more in the reflected glory of their profession than in expounding its reasons for distinction.

Yet, withal, the story of the vicissitudes of speed-plane building and testing—with an eye to the military utilization of the product—and of how pilot after pilot lays down his life that the ship may be perfected, is thrilling and engrossing. With death and destruction in quantity to satiate the most morbid taste, there has been added to the narrative a decided comedy angle which not only serves to assuage the awfulness of the test flights but to offer as well an angle almost as engaging as the main theme.

One-at-a-Time Story.

One particular point of story technique stands out: the one-character-at-a-time form of writing. In other words, here is a story whose developments are made through the work of single individuals, while the others involved unobtrusively move about until their turn comes around. So it is especially with Richard Dix. We see him almost continually from the opening to the closing shots, but for the first two-thirds of the picture he has little to do save pass a comment from time to time.

But when he really does go to work—to make the climactic test flight—Mr. Dix comes through with as fine a job as he has ever done in a picture of less than epic proportions. In a scene strikingly reminiscent of the closing ones in "Ceiling Zero"—preceded by one which might be a Beau Gestian Viking funeral brought up to date—he makes a "9-G test" (leveling out after a 10,000-foot power drive) in the face of almost certain—and sudden—death. But, thanks to the lessons learned from earlier and fatal flights, the test is successful, and all the threatened tragedy is averted, and everything ends happily.

Realistic Support.

While Karen Morley is the charming love interest, which never seems to obtrude upon the starker aspects of the story, the real support offered Mr. Dix is that given by Boyd Irwin, as the airport owner killed in a test flight; Gordon Jones, as a pilot, victim of a fatal crash, and Henry Mollison as another, crippled for life. Excellent in their portrayal of the technical phases of the picture, while smoothly performing the incidental episodes, these three, with Mr. Dix, make an incomparable quartet.

The comedy of the piece lies largely in the lines and action passed between Gene Morgan, yet another pilot (whose testimony finally clears the hero), and Gertrude Green, as Lulu, whose comportment can best be described by accentuating the name. Others in the cast include William Stelling, Shirley Ross, Billy Burrud and Cora Sue Collins.

Topping the short-subject parade in "The Pinch Singer," an excruciatingly funny Our Gang comedy, wherein "Alfalfa" is forced into the titular situation—and wins the $50 prize. "Fish Tales" is an amusing Looney Tune, and the combined releases of the Paramount and Universal newsreels round out a satisfying program.

About The Showshops

IN a gesture of generosity toward the faithful of the playhouse who have felt that New York City was a little too far away for their casual theatergoing, Mr. Ray Henderson wishes it known that Miss Katharine Cornell, the usual object of his eloquence, will appear in the Forrest Theater, Philadelphia, Pa., in the title role of her production of George Bernard Shaw's "Saint Joan" for one week only, beginning on Monday night, June 1.

NELSON B. BELL.

Guthrie McClintic, producer of "Winterset" and in private life Miss Cornell's husband and the director of all her plays, staged "Saint Joan." The settings and costumes were designed by Jo Mielziner, the current theater's undisputed master of effective scenic investiture. The matinee performances in Philadelphia will begin promptly at 2:15 p. m. and the night at 8:15. No one will be seated during the first scene of the play, which consumes 18 minutes. The original Broadway cast, including Arthur Byron, Maurice Evans, Charles Waldron, Eduardo Ciannelli and George Coulouris, will be seen in the star's support. Mail orders now are being filled, if accompanied by self-addressed, stamped envelope and proper remittance.

During her 7,000-mile tour in "Saint Joan," Miss Cornell will be seen only in Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago, Los Angeles and San Francisco. It is, of course, a keen disappointment that Washington is omitted from this brief itinerary. One suspects that in playing Philadelphia, Miss Cornell feels that she is meeting the Capital half way. Wilmington would be nearer it!

At the preview screening of "One Rainy Afternoon," on Tuesday's comparatively clear one, the drayma desks were given a few moments' serious and silent reflection by the screen "trailer" which will be utilized by theaters throughout the Nation in a week's intensive drive on behalf of the Will Rogers Memorial. With Lowell Thomas as spokesman, this fine tribute to the memory of a beloved comedian also enlists the participation of Bing Crosby, singing Rogers' favorite song, "Home on the Range;" Shirley Temple, who unveils a plaque; Irvin S. Cobb, who eulogizes his former friend and associate, and a group of leaders of the motion picture industry who stand in respectful silence as the tiny Miss Temple pulls the string disclosing the bronze of her former favorite star. Through somebody's good judgment, the voice of Bing Crosby will continue from the screen throughout the collection period that will be devoted to bolstering the Memorial fund.

When you see George Hassell on the screen in support of Grace Moore and Franchot Tone in "The King Steps Out," at the Earle tomorrow, you will require a closeup, or, at least, a second look to recognize him. Formerly one of the Gargantuas of the theater, the pompous and prodigious Mr. Hassell seems to have lost somewhere in the neighborhood of 100 pounds.

William Holbrook is working miracles with the principals and chorus of the Young Democrats Club of Washington production of "Kapital Kapers," to be seen at the National following the engagement of Henry Hull in "Tobacco Road." Miss Helen Shafer Mark, one of Washington's better mezzos, is the prima donna of the revue.

Too bad the circus could not have played here Tuesday and Wednesday, instead of Monday and Tuesday, the tragic days of the big wind and bigger rain.

"The Nightingale Flies Home," by Rupert Hughes, has been purchased by Columbia as the next production for Grace Moore. She is in Europe at the moment, unwittingly slighting kings and thereby receiving flowers instead of medals.

The Women's International League has been added to the list of sponsors of the reading of Irwin Shaw's play of "Bury the Dead," to be presented by the New Theater of Washington on Wednesday night, June 3, in Pierce Hall. The reading will be by members of the New Theater's New York acting group, some of whom appeared in the New York production of the play. A general discussion will follow.

The Roadside Players have been busy on that old red barn—which is practically new and not red—against the opening of their season, with "Around the World in 80 Days," on June 15. A new workshop has been tacked onto the south side of the structure and various improvements made in the interior of the "auditorium proper," as the saying goes.

Efforts are being made to secure John Boles for a week's engagement at the Century Theater in Baltimore, beginning Friday, May 29. If the booking is made, Mr. Boles will spend the intervening week rusticating with friends up in the Blue Ridge.

Marty Collins and Harry Peterson, on the current stage bill at the Fox, are having a swell time in Washington, as usual, and wish to be remembered to Ed Sullivan, The Post's Broadway columnist. Hi, Ed?

One-Act Plays

Two one-act plays and a musical interlude were offered by the Georgetown Players last evening in Cissel chapel.

Opening the evening's festivities was W. R. Walker's "A Pair of Lunatics," with Theodore Field and Lucy Allen, as Capt. George Fielding and Clara Manners, two guests at a party held in an insane asylum. Both are, of course, quite normal, but there are grave doubts in the mind of each as to the sanity of the other.

The second play was "The White Phantom," by Wilbur White, which tells of efforts to oust unwanted tenants. A nicely turned bit of love interest threads the mystery, and there is the usual "dumb cop" and a mother rather irked by her daughter's choice.

As a musical interlude Eleanor Hulburt offered selections on the accordion and joined with Irvin Chilcoat in several piano duets.

'Tobacco Road' Extends Visit Another Week

Henry Hull, as Jeeter, to Compete With Week's Ace Screen Bills.

Announcement was made yesterday that "Tobacco Road," with Henry Hull in his original role of Jeeter Lester, now playing a return engagement at the National Theater, will be held over for a second week at popular prices. This will fill in the date first assigned to "The Old Maid," canceled as a result of the operation of the District's ill-judged child labor law. Supporting Mr. Hull in "Tobacco Road" is an able cast, led by Mary Servoss, Donald Barry, Leon Ames, Priscilla Knowles and Haila Stoddard.

Grace Moore's latest starring vehicle for Columbia, "The King Steps Out," will be the screen attraction at the Earle Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. The role of the king in this tuneful Viennese operetta, with music by Fritz Kreisler, is played by Franchot Tone in his best manner. The supporting cast includes, among others, Walter Connolly, Raymond Walburn, Victor Jory, Elisabeth Risdon, Thurston Hall, Nana Bryant, Herman Bing and Frieda Inescourt. The stage will be headlined by the Radio City Music Hall Glee Club. Other acts will be presented by Freddie Dosh and Saul Gauman & Co.

Francis Lederer and Ida Lupino are the romantic stars of "One Rainy Afternoon," the gay Parisian farce, which comes to the screen at Loew's Fox Theater tomorrow as major feature of the film portion of the new week's entertainment. They are supported by a notable cast of comics, headed by Hugh Herbert, Ronald Young, Richard Carle, Countess Liev de Maigret, Donald Meek and Joseph Cawthorn. Music interludes occur throughout the spirited action. The vaudeville bill will be headlined by that dynamic young vocalist, Gertrude Niesen, singer par excellence. Others on the stage program will include Sammy Lewis and Patti Moore, just back from Europe.

"Champagne Charlie" is the title of the effervescent comedy announced as the chief screen feature at the Columbia Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. Paul Cavanagh and Helen Wood are the fetaured members of the cast, supported by Minna Gombell, Herbert Mundin, Montagu Love, Thomas Beck and Noel Madison. As an added attraction, the Columbia will bring back "It Happened in Washington," the two-reel comedy-drama made with a cast of local high school students and sponsored by the Loew theaters and The Washington Post.

With crowds still flocking to see the Czechoslovakian production of "Ecstasy," European prize-winner as the best picture of its year, this unique bit of cinematic symbolism continues its triumphant course at the Belasco Theater. The stellar role is played by Hedy Kiesler. It is probable that "Ecstasy" will continue through a fifth consecutive week on Lafayette Square, beginning Saturday. It will be succeeded, eventually, by Jan Kiepura and Gladys Swarthout in "Give Us This Night."

Janet Gaynor and Robert Taylor, having caught the public fancy by the spontaneity and charm of their work in the costellar roles of "Small Town Girl," will continue for a second week at the Palace in that cleverly contrived screen romance of a village belle and a rising young city surgeon. Lewis S. Stone, Charles Grapewin, Nella Walker, Frank Craven, Elizabeth Patterson and Andy Devine lead the support. The supplementary features also will be continued.

Leslie Howard and Bette Davis, in "Of Human Bondage," will continue the attraction at the Little Theater throughout the remainder of the current week. On Sunday this splendid picturization of the W. Somerset Maugham story will be succeeded on the screen by a revival of "The Lives of a Bengal Lancer," with Gary Cooper, Franchot Tone, Richard Cromwell and Sir Guy Standing.

With the slow advance of seasonable temperatures, Glen Echo Park, the Capital's free-admission amusement center in the open, is beginning to feel the surge of midsummer crowds of pleasure seekers. All of the 50-odd amusement devices, including the Spanish Garden ballroom and all of the rides, are in full operation. The Crystal Pool is scheduled to open for the summer on Wednesday, May 27.

Down at Seaside Park, on the bay at Chesapeake Beach, Md., George Vass and His Ramblers are providing snappy "swing" music and an occasional sedate waltz for dancers in the large pavilion. Boating, fishing from the half-mile pier, picnic groves and myriad other amusements in midseason operation. On Friday, May 29—in time for the Memorial Day crowds—the salt-water bathing pool will be opened for the summer.

Mme. Gurle Luise Correa, director of the Washington Opera Guild, announces that this group will present a benefit program of scenes from famous operas, sung by members of the guild in appropriate costumes, in the ballroom of the Willard next Monday night, May 25, at 8:30 o'clock. The singers will be assisted by the distinguished young pianist, Josef Levine.

Columbians

"THE SHINING HOUR." The Columbia Players present the drama in three acts and four scenes by Keith Winter, directed by Dorothea Lewis, with stage setting by Jane Lasater Rubey and lighting and technical effects by Anthony F. Merrill. At Pierce Hall, May 20 and 21. Reviewed Wednesday evening by W. A. Whitney.

THE CAST.

Judy Linden.....Bunnie Skinner
Hannah Linden.....Yvonne Kushner
Henry Linden.....Walter Bucher
Micky Linden.....Charles Grunwell
Mariella Linden.....Eileen Fowler
David Linden.....Arthur Westover

Combating the handicap of a play top-heavy with words and peopled with characters of not too strong definition, the Columbia Players last evening suffered slightly from authorial deficiencies, the while fighting every line of the way to make this production of Keith Winters "The Shining Hour" the credit it should be to all concerned, especially as it is not only a "first time" in Washington, but also the players' closing offering for the 1935-1936 season.

The cast of six, for the most part, did nobly, and the direction of Dorothea Lewis gave considerable more authenticity to the drama than might have been adduced merely by the lines.

The tragidrama concerns the Linden family—they are all Lindens, three brothers and a spinster sister—and what happens when the oldest brother returns home with wife No. 2 to stay pending the construction of his new home. The wife is young and charming, and the middle brother falls in love with her, his own wife conducting her own private suttee that he may be happy. All the time big sister, frank, at times acidulous, seems to sense some malign influence in the new arrival's presence. And the whole thing terminates with wife finally deciding to leave for a divorce and marry the widower.

Miss Kushner Scores.

Yvonne Kushner did a grand piece of work as the spinster sister, furnishing quite the most consistently convincing interpretation of the evening, and this part was none too clearly limned by the author.

The self-effacing wife was played by Bunnie Skinner, with Eileen Fowler making the complications in what apparently once had been domestic felicity. Arthur Westover led his confreres, as the Don Juanish widower-to-be, with Walter Bucher the unimaginative husband and Charles Grunwell the youngest brother.

Plays Daredevil of the Clouds

Having been long absent from the local screen, Richard Dix returns to view this week at the Metropolitan as star of Columbia Pictures' production of "Devil's Squadron," a pictorial tribute to the courage of the test fliers and "stunt" men of the air, written by Dick Grace, famous aviator. Karen Morley appears in the principal feminine role, as will be learned from other columns of today's Post, in which yesterday's opening of this feature is reviewed.

New York.

Curious that the comeback spotlight should focus on the male singers of the Stem this season . . . First it played around the figure of Benny Fields, singling him out for rich rewards of radio and vaudeville . . . Now that Fields has spurted into the higher brackets, Dame Fortune is playing the spotlight beams on John Steel, across the street at the Paradise . . . It is sort of a return spotlight engagement, this one, for Steel, from 1921 to 1929, was the hottest thing along the Queerialto, a $3,500-a-week star of the Music Box Revue and Ziegfeld "Follies," a show-stopper at the famous Palace.

PEGGY FEARS.

• • • •

It's been seven or eight years since those high days, however, and in the interim Steel took a lacing and a cuffing that led him into tiny dives that he wouldn't have patronized in his hey day. . . . He went into these places to earn a living, and he sang his songs and tried to take it cheerfully, but, once you've been on top, it's hard to work in the cellars . . . The years rolled on and, now and then I'd read that he was playing this honky-tonk or that, and on dull days the columnists would moralize on the experiences of John Steel.

• • • •

Some months ago, I heard from him again . . . A short, timid invitation to drop over and hear him sing at the Chesapeake House . . . To my amazement, he was in better voice than ever before, and when he returned to the table I proposed a toast to his comeback . . . "I'll take milk, Ed," he said . . . "Haven't touched a drop of liquor in a long, long time. Got myself a new voice teacher, and if I get a break, I'll be back on top again" . . . The courage of this fellow, who had stood up gamely under a seven-year drubbing, was magnificent . . . A few weeks later he got his break—at the Paradise . . . He's been stopping shows ever since, and when he sings the old, remembered songs, girls in the audience pull out their tiny lace handkerchiefs and dab at their eyes, for this is a "Water Under the Bridge" chapter come to life . . . The answer is that talent can't be denied . . . Flo Ziegfeld would have been pleased at "The Great Ziegfeld" . . . I think he would have been even more pleased to learn that John Steel had crashed back into the ranks of the headliners, for Steel was one of his pets, and he often talked of him.

• • • •

Marguerite Sylva, Met star, was operated upon a few hours ago at St. Luke's . . . She was badly injured in a crash while automobiling with Senator Craven's family . . . Peggy Fears is dickering for a night club warbling contract . . . Courtney Riley Cooper, visiting J. Edgar Hoover with N. T. Granlund, was indignant at Hoover's comparatively slender pay check . . . He offered Hoover half of his G-Men magazine articles . . . J. Edgar turned this down, just as he's turned down all similar offers.

• • • •

Those of you who are handicapped can take heart from the example of one Bob Christenberry, who lost an arm with the famous Fifth Marines . . . He is the energetic new manager at the Hotel Astor, and since he took charge last October he has changed that famous Broadway landmark into the most distinctive of Stem spots . . . Under the persuasion of his energy, bankers broke down and allotted him close $400,000 for improvements . . . Christenberry is a Floridian, worked as a newspaperman in Washington, D. C., managed hotels in Pittsburgh . . . He says that newspapermen, instead of turning to fiction writing, should turn to hotel management, that their training is the ideal preparation for the hotel business . . . He believes that the loss of an arm or a leg is a help rather than a handicap, points out that he is easily remembered because he is the only one-armed hotel manager.

Prediction: Joe Louis will flatten Max Schmeling in any round he decides upon . . . Only place in town where they still play country-type games is Jay C. Flippen's apartment . . . You bend down and try to pick up a chair with your head against the wall; they tie you into knots and you've got to untangle them . . . And Claire Carter has one trick, where four people lift a fifth high into the air, supporting him only on their fingertips, that is more fun than a cage of monkeys . . . Standard Oil Tycoon Bob Hague has the most absorbing apartment in town, with ship models and watches of every description . . . Whatever became of Hope Williams?

Marion Miley Out in Golf Tourney

Miss Newell Completes Rout of American Cup Players.

Victor, Miss Barton Play Today for English Women's Title.

By the Associated Press.

Southport, England, May 20.—Another American assault on the British Women's golf championship became only a memory today as a pair of long-hitting British girls, Bridget Newell and Pam Barton, fought their way through to the 36-hole final, which will be played over the Southport and Ainsdale course tomorrow.

Miss Newell climaxed one of the most disastrous routs ever administered an American team in recent years when she beat the last American survivor, Marion Miley, of Lexington, Ky., 4 and 3, in the fourth round. Not even the most optimistic of the British critics could have foreseen last Monday an all-British semifinal round such as was waged this afternoon.

While Miss Newell was beating the American, this morning, Kathleen Garnham put out Mrs. Edith Rhodes, 4 and 3; Molly Gourlay eliminated Jean Hamilton, 1 up, and Miss Barton defeated Dorritt Wilkins, 3 and 2.

In the afternoon, Miss Barton, now a finalist for the third straight year, defeated Miss Garnham, 5 and 4, and Miss Newell beat Miss Gourley, 3 and 2.

Miss Barton probably played the greatest competitive match-play rounds of the tournament in winning today When she did lose a hole she lost it by a good margin, but she had five birdies in the morning against Miss Wilkins, and three more in the afternoon.

Because of this superlative performance, Miss Barton was a slight favorite to win the title tomorrow, but Miss Newell's performance during the whole week has been so notable that the critics are beginning to believe she can do anything. First, she won the medal, breaking the woman's competitive course record with a 74 to do so. Then in order she defeated the defending champion, Wanda Morgan, the 1930 champion, Diana Fishwick, Mrs. H. V. Newton, Miss Miley and the veteran, Miss Gourlay.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 20.—Driving their former teammate, Leroy Parmelee, from the mound, the New York Giants chalked up their ninth straight victory and took over the National League lead from St. Louis today as they defeated the Cardinals, 10 to 7. The victory was the Giants' thirteenth success in 14 home games.

Parmelee, who had beaten the Giants and Carl Hubbell in 17 innings at St. Louis, was forced to abdicate during the fifth inning when the Giants put across four runs, with Mel Ott hitting his seventh homer.

Eight Ringmen Win Olympic Positions

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 20.—Uncle Sam's team of fighters to carry the Stars and Stripes into the ring in the Olympic games at Berlin next August, fought it out for first and second places in the United States team tonight before a cheering crowd of 19,152 spectators in the Chicago Stadium.

The eight newly crowned champions are, 112-pound class, Louis Laurie, Cleveland; 118 pounds, Jackie Wilson, Cleveland; 126 pounds, Ted Kara, Cleveland; 136 pounds, Andy Scrivani, Chicago; 147 pounds, Howell King, Detroit; 160 pounds, Jimmy Clark, Jamestown, N. Y.; 175 pounds, Carl Vinciquerra, Omaha; heavyweight, Arthur Oliver, Chicago.

The alternates, who also will make the trip to Berlin, fighting in case of injury to the title holders, were the losers of tonight's battles.

The receipts of tonight's contests were $33,124, which will go to the American Olympic fund to defray the expenses of the boxers for their trip across the Atlantic.

Post Toasties, E Street Champions, in Debut

So crisp they expect to make a crackling good debut, and armed with a brand new baseball (price $1.25, including 15 per cent discount) The Post Toasties, alias the E Street Starlings, will invade Brookland this morning to do battle with the Michigan Avenue Home for Aged, alias a group of Cath lic University coaches, promptly at 11 o'clock. The sport, incidentally, is baseball.

If the Toasties see their shadows the game will be postponed because of inclement weather. They will be without the services of one or two regulars who are suffering from exposure to fresh air, but should present a strong line-up. Among those expected for the rites are "Sugar-Daddy Dulaney, "Squirrel" Donaldson, "Jumping John" Riseling, "Two-Bob" Whitney, "Just-Call-Me-Mr." McCormick and a flock of guys called, "Boy."

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

Cleveland, Ohio, May 20.

Master Buddy Lewis, if he can read, is finding himself something of a celebrity as the Washington ball club swings through the West. If he can't read, perchance, he should be realizing anyway that quite a fuss is being made over him in this end of the American League.

The 19-year-old kid who is proving such a potent package as Washington's third baseman, with his .365 batting average and his masterful play in the field, is now being bracketed with the Yankees' Joe DiMaggio as the prize rookie of the 1936 season.

POVICH.

"How about this kid, Lewis?" is the first question that local baseball scriveners in every Western city are popping at Manager Bucky Harris.

"Which one is Buddy Lewis?" hotel clerks whisper furtively as the Nats check in at the different hostelries.

"Are you Buddy Lewis?" the young autograph hounds ask in bright-eyed hope as they approach each new and unfamiliar face with book and pencil in hand.

"Box car headlines and lengthy pieces in the papers and close up pictures hail young John Kelly Lewis as the new sensation on the Washington club which specializes in picking up swell young infielders. The names of such as Bucky Harris, Buddy Myer, Ossie Bluege, Joe Cronin and Cecil Travis are reeled off and now, as they say, along comes Buddy Lewis.

He is indeed, just a kid. Buck Newsom gave the best seven word description of the lad when he said: "He looks like Cecil Travis' baby brother." And Travis, you remember, is only 22. The resemblance is, indeed, marked. Like Travis, Buddy Lewis is tall, apparently frail, a bit knock-kneed and truly boyish looking. Travis is a dead ringer for an immature college freshman, but Lewis looks for all the world as if he had just escaped from some prep school.

How does all this fame and publicity strike young John Kelly Lewis? This department was interested to the extent that it upped and asked young John Kelly Lewis:

He didn't stop to think. At his age, I guess, none of us pondered the advisability of making a profound statement. Just as naturally as a kid would reach for candy, he lighted up, smiled and said:

"Gee, ain't it great?"

It must be great to a kid who's wanted to be a big leaguer ever since he was big enough to lift a drug store bat. That is Buddy Lewis' confession.

"But all this seems awful sudden to me," he went on. "Sometimes I get a little bit scared. I never dreamed of being a big star like they think I'm gonna be. I just wanted to play baseball in the big leagues. If people begin to expect too much of me, I think it's gonna be awful tough on me. But I ain't gonna stop tryin'."

And what did young Master Lewis think was his biggest thrill in the big leagues so far? This department was surprised, too.

"Well, I guess the biggest kick I've gotten out of this Western trip is going into these ball parks. I used to listen to the games on the radio and I had my own ideas of what the parks looked like, but I was still awful curious. I just liked to see the places where all these teams were playing and get a look at where the fences were. Of course, I was most interested in where the rightfield fences were."

That his new found success, fame and publicity have not spoiled Buddy Lewis is as apparent as the proboscis on this department's face.

"I guess I'm the luckiest fellow who ever broke into baseball," confessed Lewis. "When Chattanooga picked me up, they didn't have any third baseman and I just walked into the job. When Bucky Harris called me to Washington, they didn't have any regular third baseman either and the gate was wide open. If I'd a-come up with a team that didn't particularly need a third baseman, maybe I'd never a-got a chance."

"Golly, that's easy. No fellow ever had the luck I did. No rookie ever had a teacher like Ossie Bluege. He taught me more about playing third base in one afternoon than I learned in a whole season at Chattanooga. It's not what he tells you, exactly, but how he teaches you."

Lindstrom to Resume Career Next Year If He Gets in Shape

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 20.—Freddie Lindstrom isn't through with baseball. He hopes to resume his career as a player next year, if his condition permits.

The 30-year-old Chicagoan, whose sudden decision to quit the Brooklyn Dodgers came as a shocking surprise to baseball fans, made known his plans when he returned today. He intends to take his family to a summer camp on a lake near Minocqua, Wis., and spend the balance of the year fishing, hunting and roughing it.

"If I feel next winter that I'm in shape to play my best once more," Lindstrom explained, "I'll return to the Dodgers, or to any club that wants me as a player. But if I don't feel I'm in shape I'll hang up my baseball stuff for good."

Lindstrom offered a surprising explanation for his decision to be placed in voluntary retirement by declaring that he was unable to give value received for the money paid him.

Said Freddie:

"I simply hated the thought of taking money when I was unable to give anything in return. That's why I quit. For the last four years I have been a victim of injuries. As I sat on the bench, unable to play, the thought of not being able to earn my salary depressed me.

"The Brooklyn club was nice to me, but I didn't want to take the money if I couldn't be of any help. That's why I quit."

Lindstrom, still a young man, has preserved himself by careful and temperate living. He has saved his money and does not have to worry about a job for the present. If his campaign to restore himself to playing condition fails, he plans to enter business with friends in Chicago.

$300,000 Bid Braddock For Bout

Promoters Make Offer for 15-Round Fight With Haynes.

Negro Must First Beat Carnera; Would Be in Philadelphia.

By the United Press.

Philadelphia, May 20.—James J. Braddock, world heavyweight boxing champion, today was offered $300,000 to defend his title against Leroy Haynes, Philadelphia Negro, in a 15-round bout here this summer.

In announcing the offer, which was sent to Joe Gould, manager of Braddock, Promoters Taylor and Gunnis said the date of the bout had been placed entirely at the option of Braddock, dependent upon his acceptance of the bid.

The match would be held in the municipal stadium, where Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney staged their first encounter in 1926.

There was one stipulation in the offer, however. The promoters said Haynes first must defeat Primo Carnera, the former champion, in their return bout at Brooklyn, May 27, before he can receive consideration for the proposed match with Braddock.

New York, May 20.—Jimmy Braddock, world heavyweight champion, is not ignoring the $300,000 guarantee offer to fight in Philadelphia this summer, but is holding up a decision until the heavyweight atmosphere is cleared by forthcoming bouts, Manager Joe Gould said tonight.

Steele, Overlin Bout Sought For District

By Bill McCormick.

Another police benefit boxing card, headed by a bout of national importance, is in prospect for Washington this summer if tentative plans are carried out. Freddie Steele, the sensational middleweight from the Pacific Coast, will meet Ken Overlin, ranked fourth nationally, if the plan is carried out.

Steele probably will be champion of the middleweight division by the time the bout—probably to be held in September—takes place. He is fighting Babe Risko for the 165-pound crown in July and will rule an overwhelming favorite to lift the bauble from the present titleholder, whom he recently trounced very soundly in an overweight engagement.

Pete Reilly, well-known international figure in the fight game, has control, or enough control of Steele, to bring him here. Reilly managed Freddie Miller, who dropped his featherweight crown to Pete Sarron in the recent police benefit card at Griffith Stadium.

Reilly Impressed.

The gate of $32,000 greatly impressed Reilly, who received a flat guarantee of $10,000 for Miller's services. Immediately after the bout he declared Washington was one of the best fight towns in the country and the conduct of bouts here very good, even though he did lose the title.

Before leaving, he agreed to allow Battling Battalino, former featherweight title-holder who now cuts a wide swath in the lightweight ranks, to fight Howard Scott and tentatively agreed to book Wesley Ramey, second-ranking lightweight, here sometime in the summer. He also, of course, tacitly agreed to the Steele-Overlin bout for some date after the Pacific Coast knockerout wins the title.

Reilly's recommendation and acceptance of the Capital as a good fight spot has done much to simplify the task of local matchmakers. Goldie Ahearn was able to reach an agreement with the managers of Welterweight Champion Barney Ross soon after the Sarron-Miller engagement and other good fighters as readily agreed to show here.

Nats Defeat Indians, 7-6; Ending Streak

By Shirley Povich.

Sports Editor of The Post.

Ceveland, May 20.—The Nats staggered uncertainly toward victory this afternoon and finally made it by the squeaky figures of 7 to 6 when Jimmy DeShong, who for five innings had been an incorrigibly wasteful performer on the pitching mound, reformed with great suddenness.

DeShong had been given a variety of leads in those early innings when the Indians trailed the Nats at various points by scores of 1-0, 4-1 and 5-3, but by the end of the fifth DeShong was trying to pitch his way out of a 6-6 deadlock.

But with the score tied, the 5,000 Cleveland partisans in the ball park were prematurely gay. It developed from that fifth inning until the finish DeShong was superb. He yielded but one more hit, a single in the sixth, and in the last three innings he yielded no hits at all.

Lewis' Running Helps.

It was a rare piece of base running by Buddy Lewis, combined with a rare piece of good luck, that permitted the Nats to score the winning run back in the sixth inning. Lewis smashed a single into rightfield with one out to get on base and began a wild dash when Powell singled into leftfield.

Gambling on his speed, Lewis rounded second and raced for third despite Galatzer's pickup of the ball in short left field. He slid safely into the bag ahead of the throw in a cloud of dust and when the ball bounded off his ankle into the Washington dugout, Lewis scrambled up and raced home on the play, which was scored as an error for Galatzer.

Four Washington errors behind DeShong were no help to the right-hander in those early innings when he was permitting the Indians nine of their ten hits. And three Cleveland errors behind the left-handed Thorton Lee combined to make it a very loosely played ball game indeed.

Lloyd Brown was the final victim as the Nats brought their three-game losing streak to a halt and expanded Cleveland's current losing

Rowe Victor Over Ruffing as Each Yields But Six Safeties.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, May 20.—Marvin Owen's home run, his only hit of the game, broke up a hurling duel between Schoolboy Rowe and Red Ruffing and gave the Detroit Tigers a 4-to-3 victory over the New York Yankees in ten innings today.

Owen's home run gave Rowe an edge in a game in which each pitcher allowed six hits and walked three. Rowe fanned ten Yankees, however, in registering his fourth victory of the season.

Browns Score 3d Straight Victory

Defeat Red Sox, 12-8, on 9 Hits; Solters Is Star at Bat.

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, May 20.—The St. Louis Browns slapped down the highly touted Boston Red Sox today, 12 to 8, garnering the dozen runs from only nine hits, but profiting by nine bases on balls.

One of Boston's nine hits was Jimmy Foxx's ninth home run of the year. Boston used six pitchers. It was the Browns' third consecutive victory, a winning streak especially pleasing to a team which recently lost 13 in a row.

Julius Solters led the Browns' attack with three hits, including a triple, in five times at bat, and drove in five runs.

Mahi Triumphs in Upset at Hagerstown, Pays $20.20 Mutuel

Stool Pigeon Second in Feature

By Walter Haight,
A Staff Correspondent.

Hagerstown, Md., May 20.—Mahi, whose sire was Salmon-Trout, made "poor fish" out of the favorite players in the feature race at the Hagerstown Fair Association's race course this afternoon after John L. Public had packed the family jewels on the back of Stool Pigeon. Mahi proceeded to run away with the 5-furlong dash named the Potomac Edison Purse. The 4-year-old gelding led Stool Pigeon by a comfortable margin of two lengths. A like distance away came Scotty Don to take third money.

Mahi found only a scattered backing in the crowd of 5,000, and, after the jockeys had weighed out, there was $20.20 waiting for each and every holder of a $2 ticket

Stool Pigeon, which suffered a slight leg injury at Pimlico, was rushed into the lead as the field left the chute at the head of the stretch, but Mahi was not long in becoming a threat. Midway of the back stretch they teamed, and then Jockey V. Wisner guided his mount through on the rail while Stool Pigeon swung wide. From that point to the finish line the result was a formality.

Peggy Can, a little daughter of Canter, hopped out of the No. 1 stall and was never headed in the first race, a 6½-furlong test, ridden by T. Fowler. Peggy Can had daylight to spare over Scotty's Pride, with Spear third. The winner was the favorite at $5.

The favorites continued to walk the chalk mark in the second race, when Engle's Boy, capably handled by Jockey Sammy Palumbo, made a show of a field of eight, to pay a $3.60 mutuel. Portever, with L. Pikor up, came from far back to take the place award at $19.50. Gay Bride was third after following the pace most of the way.

Wins by Neck.

The sire Canter sent his second winner of the day to the post in Shaggy Ann. The little filly, foaled by Annie Rooney, was hustled to the front by Jockey G. Bond and refused to quit, taking a neck decision from Mazyniata. Red Label was third. The winner was only lukewarm in the betting and paid $14.70.

The Canter combination accounted for the daily double pay-off of $27.40.

Soupcon gave the favorite players another chance to cheer in the fifth race. With N. Brooks booting, Soupcon downed, among others, Handley and Flower Time to pay a $4.40 mutuel.

The boos bounced off the mountains following the judges' decision in the sixth race. Jim Brown came from far back to nip More Pep at the wire. In the absence of a camera, the crowd had to take the judges' word for it. There was no question that Fife was third. The winner rewarded with a $5.40 payoff.

River Rose led from start to finish to win the seventh race from Mint Bud and Bendromel. The top mutuel was $7.70.

DEAN SWIFT avoided the early pace, circled his field leaving the backstretch and, closing stoutly under intermittent punishment, was slowly going away at the end. ST. MORITZ moved up fast nearing the far turn, assumed a slight lead in the stretch and, despite hard urging, was unable to withstand the bid of the winner. MY BLONDE, hard ridden to join into contention, finished with good courage. AEGIS, well placed from the outset and hard ridden to dispose of MORLUTE, weakened through the stretch run. FORCED LANDING was unable to reach the leaders. MORLUTE had early speed, but stopped badly. The others were never prominent.

OPEN RANGE, well placed from the start, went to front when MISS TROPHY began tiring and drew out through the last furlong under urging. LITTLE DINAH was prominently placed from the start, saved ground in the stretch, but weakened in the last few strides. SIR TEN, away well, lacked speed to keep up, dropped back in the first furlong, moved up steadily on the outside leaving the backstretch, closed gamely in the stretch, getting up in the last stride to draw on even terms with LITTLE DINAH. MISS TROPHY displayed good speed for the first five furlongs, faltered thereafter. WISE ANNE, hard ridden, was unable to reach the leaders. GIFT OF ROSES, well placed for the first three furlongs, was unable to threaten the leaders thereafter.

DOGMATA, never far from the pace while racing restrained for the first half mile, moved to the front with a rush when called upon and drew out through the last sixteenth. JEZREEL responded gamely to hard urging through the stretch and outlasted BLUE DAY at the end. BLUE DAY moved up steadily on the inside nearing the stretch and closed determinedly. RETIRED displayed good speed in pacemaking, but faltered through the stretch run. PLAYFUL MARTHA closed some ground.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TALKED ABOUT, $4.80, $3.30, $2.70; SUN CRAX, $5.80, $4.20; CARDINALIS, $5.10.

TALKED ABOUT moved up fast around the far turn, lost considerable ground at the stretch turn, responded gamely to urging and, wearing down the leaders, drew out fast. SUNCRAX, well placed all the way, fought it out gamely to the close under energetic handling. CARDINALIS, sent into contention in the opening strides, fought for room and found energy in the end. MAESTROM, hard ridden all the way, was unable to improve her position in the closing drive. PER CENT was unable to improve her position under hard urging. PATTI closed some ground. MR. BLAZE, a first time starter, displayed a high order of speed for the first five-sixteenths. SUN CAPTURE, away fast, was shuffled back in the run to the first turn.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LADY HIGLOSS, $4.40, $3.00, $2.40; HAPPY BOLIVAR, $5.90, $3.50; NEW DEAL, $3.00.

LADY HIGLOSS displayed good speed from the start, was kept under urging to shake off HAPPY BOLIVAR, drew clear and held away to the end. HAPPY BOLIVAR, away fast, was forced into hustling tactics while racing with the winner and continued stoutly to the close. NEW DEAL, in the first flight throughout, held on willingly when placed under pressure. PICKLE CHANCE dropped back soon after the start, came through on the inside at the stretch turn and closed gamely. STOCKS was unable to reach the leaders. FLAMENCO had early speed, but tired. PRECURSOR was outrun all the way.

SIXTH RACE—Mile and 70 yards. Purse, $3,000 added. The Betsy Williams Stakes. For 3-year-old fillies. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 5:07. Off at 5:08½. LITTLE MIRACLE followed in nearest pursuit of the pace, wore down SEA CRADLE when called upon and drew out fast through the closing furlong, winning with speed in reserve. SEA CRADLE took command in the run to the first turn, opened up a good lead and, despite holding on gamely, was not match for the winner when challenged. PELERINE, restrained for the first half mile, moved up strongly when called upon, but was unable to improve her position in the final drive. TONY'S WIFE closed some ground. OPERA BOUFFE was never dangerous. MISS BAM was far back throughout.

SEVENTH RACE—Mile and one-eighth. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:38. Off at 5:46½. Winner, Mr. Simmons' sr. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SEAWICK, $15.40, $6.30, $3.90; MORALIST, $7.10, $4.20; HICKORY LAD, $3.50.

SEAWICK drew clear straightening out on the backstretch, was rated along under slight restraint and, hard ridden at the end, held the closing bid of MORALIST safe. The latter was nearest attendance of the leader for most of the way, closed gamely and was catching the winner at every stride at the close. HICKORY LAD raced his way up gradually, saved ground in the stretch and fought it out determinedly, though unable to threaten the first two. PLATINUM BLONDE, under intermittent punishment, raced well and had no excuses. POLO BAR, unruly at the post, faltered after going six furlongs. COMING BACK was outrun all the way.

EIGHTH RACE—Mile and one-sixteenth. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 6:18. Off at 6:21. Winner, Francis Staples' blk. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CHRYSEIS, $6.60, $3.60, $3.50; BUSBY, $4.70, $4.30; SEEDLING, $13.10.

CHRYSEIS, a forward factor from the start, fought it out gamely for the command, drew clear nearing the stretch and, hard ridden for the remainder of the way, held BUSBY safe at the end. BNSBY, reserved until leaving the backstretch, moved up stoutly in the last five-sixteenths and closed willingly under pressure. SEEDLING was pressing approximately placed all the way and continued with good energy to the close. SUN CAMP, a trailer for the first six furlongs, closed some ground. PEACE MOVE loomed up in menacing fashion nearing the stretch, but flattened out badly in the closing drive. MOVIE LASS had good early speed, was pinched back nearing the far turn, retiring steadily thereafter.

Bill Edmonston Tops Series Batters

Hitting Even .600; Eastern Far Down on List in Team Batting.

Tables also disclose Bill Edmonston, slugging second baseman of the series-leading Western team, as the leading hitter with an average of a flat .600. Jimmy Wise, Tech's subcatcher, who filled in when Whitey France was declared ineligible, is the current runner-up, with .556.

Roosevelt High's cellar-sharing club is the only school hitting over .300 and has a comfortable lead over Tech, the runner-up, which is batting .284. Eastern has the slight consolation of leading the home run brigade with five circuit drives, with Central having accumulated four round-trippers.

Eastern's 23 hits demonstrate the slugging talent of the Lincoln Parkers no little, 10 of them being extra-base blows.

While Edmondston is leading Western's batters and Wise, Tech's, Francis Coakley and Howard Blundon are setting the pace for Roosevelt with an average of .500, Gordon Bartoo, slugging first-baseman for Eastern, with .471, and Joe Moran, for Central, with .429. Moran has collected more hits than anybody else in the series.

Bernie Lieb Is Awarded Harris Cup at Catholic University

Boxing, Cage Schedules Listed

Basketball Captain Held Outstanding Scholar and Athlete.

Bernie Lieb, lantern-jawed captain of Catholic University's 1936 basket ball team and one of the most popular athletes on the campus, has been designated recipient of the Harris Cup, awarded annually to the man best exemplifying the university's standards of scholar-gentleman-athlete. The announcement was made last night by Arthur J. Bergman, director of athletics.

Lieb, who will be honored at commencement exercises, played center for the Flying Cardinals for three years and was acclaimed the greatest courtman to sport the Red and Black since the days of Ray Foley. He also was a member of the track team, specializing in the javelin throw. He will graduate from the school of education and expects to return to the university next year in pursuit of his master's degree.

Sharing interest with this announcement were the Cardinals' 1937 boxing and basket ball cards. The outstanding ring engagement is with Army, the match to be fought at West Point. Duke, North Carolina State, Pitt and Western Maryland also are on the schedule. The court program is of the same high caliber as last season's.

Conspicuously absent from both schedules are University of Maryland teams, both of which the Cardinals humbled last year. The Catholic-Maryland boxing match, which resulted in a surprising defeat for the Terrapins, almost resulted in a near-riot and is believed to have precipitated a break in relations.

Commissioners in 4-3 Victory; Buscher Stars

Three runs in the sixth followed an error, and Pitcher Emmitt Buscher had to wait until the tenth inning to collect a 4-3 victory for the D. C. Commissioners over Agriculture in the U. S. Government League. At that, Buscher, who fanned 11 batters, escaped defeat in the eighth when Noone's triple and Nelson's single tied the score. Mills' triple and Chilcott's long fly accounted for the winning run. Maxwell pitched a good game for the Aggies.

Eastern, Western Will Play Today

The Eastern-Western interhigh game will be played today on the Lincoln Park field. Originally scheduled for last Tuesday the game was moved up a day in order to avoid a conflict with the competitive drill. Then came the rain and, as a result, the battle was postponed until today.

Undefeated in the series, Western rules a strong favorite to trip up the defending champion Easterners, who have sustained two defeats in three games. Pitching has enabled Western to zoom to the top this year, and the lack of pitching has sent the champions down the ladder.

Either Lee Kushman or Ted Kinsman will open fire against Eastern today with the latter the probable selection.

Furr May Tour Country With Sarron

Erwin Makes Offer to Take Phil Along on Nation-Wide Itinerary.

Phil Furr, District welterweight champion, will team up with Pete Sarron, featherweight champion of the world, for a nation-wide tour, if an offer made by Jimmy Erwin, Sarron's manager, is accepted.

Erwin would handle Phillip, who fights Harry Dublinsky at Griffith Stadium next Monday night, only in out-of-town bouts if the offer, reported to entail a $1,000 purchase price, is accepted.

Furr has recommended to his manager, Ralph Murdock, that the offer be accepted. Erwin emphasized that he did not wish to share in Furr's earnings here, but would feature the District title-holder in the States to be played by Sarron and his stable mate, Heavyweight Buck Everett.

"I'm swamped with offers for Sarron and mean to keep him busy," Erwin declared. "Naturally, I would insist on the promoters booking Everett and Furr right along with Petey.

"Phil's one great fault has been that he has fought too often in his home town. A few good wins somewhere else not only would gain him more national prestige, but would make Washington appreciate him more."

Accounts-Deposits Nine Wins, 4 to 3

Although outhit nearly 2 to 1, Accounts and Deposits tripped RFC, 4 to 3, in a Sports Center Government League game yesterday on the Ellipse. Harry Seay pitched for the winners, striking out five and walking two.

Individual batting honors went to Williams, of RFC, with three hits—one of them a double—in four appearances at the plate. First Baseman Kell, a teammate, hit a pair of two-baggers.

Baer's Suit Ended May Re-Enter Ring

San Francisco, May 20 (AP).—Max Baer's long court fight with his first manager, J. Hamilton Lorimer, was officially ended today and the former heavyweight boxing champion immediately started talking about "a comeback."

Under the terms of the agreement, Lorimer quits all claims against Baer for $55,000.

Ancil Hoffman, who will be his manager exclusively now, said the big Californian will go into the mountains next month for a preliminary training session.

60 Women Vie Today in Finals Of Pictorial Review Golf Play

Tantamount to a national handicap championship, the Pictorial Review women's golf tournament will be completed today on some two dozen courses throughout the country, with Indian Spring Club the scene of the Middle Atlantic finals.

A field of more than 60 feminine swingers from Baltimore, Virginia and the District will gather at the Four Corners course this morning to decide who will reign as low net queen of this section for 1936.

At the same time the winner of this district will have the honor of matching her score against that of winners in other sections.

Mrs. Stephen DeLamater, of Kenwood, led the 26 Washington women in the qualifying trials at the clubs recently by virtue of her 108—29—75, while 17-year-old Marion Brown, of Manor, clicked off the lowest gross, an 83. Miss Brown plays with 17-year-old Ellen Kincaid, of Congressional, and Mrs. C. D. Bills, of Columbia.

Play will be at 9 o'clock, with Mrs. DeLamater, Mrs. G. C. Roney, of Washington, and Miss Betty Keeler, leaving the tee first.

George Diffenbaugh, Indian Spring pro, will conduct the tournament.

Only seven District golfers have entered the Baltimore Country Club invitation tournament which opens this morning at Five Farms course. Post entries may boost the District contingent to 15.

Miller B. Stevinson and Dr. Paul Stewart, of Columbia, play at 1:40; Albert MacKenzie, Columbia, and W. R. McCallum, Washington at 1:45; Ralph Fowler and Rudy Harrell, Washington at 2:10; Algie Gardiner, jr., and John C. Fulton, of Baltimore Country Club at 2:20.

Lou Laudick and Clyde B. Asher defeated Jack Ryerson, outstanding New York amateur golfer, and Albert Mackenzie, 4 and 3 yesterday at Columbia in an informal match. Laudick's 76 was low.

Jimmy Norvell, Dave Thomson's young assistant at Washington Golf and Country Club, took advantage of a light day, and played 12 holes of his course in even par. Reesie Hair, former club champion, was his companion.

Beaver Dam's course will be open tomorrow for practice rounds for the Star Cup.

Two of the Ones That Got Away

Two tarpon, big enough to be the ones that usually "got away" in the fish stories, that are almost as big as the fishermen who caught them.

Out Fishin' . . . .

By Jack Hawley.

Local anglers interested in the summer fishing contest sponsored by the West Palm Beach Fishing Club will be interested in the following standings of competition among Eastern summer vacationists. The silver king (tarpon) is holding court at Useppa Island on the West Coast of Florida. In the past two days Usepppa rodsmen, fishing in the waters of Boca Grande and Captiva passes, report 27 tarpon taken. This indicates that the peak of the tarpon fishing season is rapidly approaching. Tarpon are running good and big. Several 140 or 150 pounders were hooked, brought to gaff and released.

Several days of unusually chilly weather for this season of the year provided sailfishermen with plenty of action, but none was able to top the 8 feet 1 inch entry of C. A. Penick, South Boston, Va. While Penick's prize was a "gold button" sail, it was far short of the 8 feet 7½ inches beauty which won last summer's event for Fred D. Buttner.

In the weight division Mrs. R. J. Miller, of Youngstown, Ohio, with a 61½-pound sailfish was leading this week, while J. L. Low, of Cedartown, Ga., topped the marlin entries with a 79½-pound catch. The fish he took with a rod and reel was fully 70 pounds lighter than that which O. A. Gane, West Palm Beach realty broker, brought out of the surf with his bare hands a few weeks ago, to hang up an all-time record for unusual game catches.

Harry Sterling, Rockville Center, Long Island, with a 35-pound kingfish; J. H. Sherbacon, of New York City, with a 40-pound barracuda; Miss Dorothy Hare, of Rochester, N. Y., with a 42-pound wahoo, and W. E. Garrett, of Burlington, N. J., with a 27-pound Jack Crevalle, upheld the Easterners' honors in the competition.

Asa E. Wilson, of Detroit, entered a 74-pound amberjack; G. W. Eigenrauch, of Princeton, N. J., hauled in a 4-pound 14-ounce pompano while surf fishing; Barton Blakelock, Niagara Falls, took a 20-pound snook in the tidewater, and John S. Simms, West Palm Beach, entered a 10-pound 8-ounce speckled trout.

Dolphin, mackerel, tuna, bonito and barracuda have been plentiful at the sailfishing grounds along the edge of the Gulf Stream here according to fishing club officials, who are expecting one of the largest throngs of sportsmen here for the fishing this summer.

Strong Demand Continues for Heavy Steel

Orders, Above Seasonal, Lift Production to 68½ Per Cent.

New York, May 20.—"Unseasonably well sustained demand for heavy steel products has lifted output one point to 68½ per cent of capacity," says Iron Age in its weekly summary today. "This week's level is only slightly under the year's high, and the rise is particularly significant in view of curtailed buying by the automotive industry and lighter takings by agricultural districts. Ingot production is higher in the Valleys and at Pittsburgh, Buffalo and Cleveland, while all other districts are holding their own.

"Finishing mill schedules are well maintained and tin plate output has been raised to practical capacity. Although new buying of sheets and strip steel is at a somewhat reduced rate, shipments to the automotive and other large consuming industries are abated and mill backlogs are more than sufficient to maintain production through May.

"It is becoming more apparent that demand for the heavy steel products is sufficiently strong to offset reduced automotive requirements in the early summer. A moderate decline in output during June can scarcely be avoided, but it will unquestionably be less than seasonal. Performance during the third quarter can hardly be forecast, as an early advance in prices would certainly influence July and August demand.

"The requirements of the railroads, oil and gas producers and the construction industry continue to dominate the current steel market. The Texas Empire Pipe Line Co. has placed 41,000 tons of electrically welded pipe for a Kansas City-Chicago line, and the Shell interests have taken bids on 25,000 tons for a line in California.

"Railroad orders include 2,000 freight cars for the Missouri Pacific. The American Refrigerator Transit Co. is inquiring for 1,000 40-ton refrigerator cars and the Southern Pacific has added 18 locomotives and 20 horse cars to its pending inquiry for 2,800 cars. The Chesapeake & Ohio and the Pere Marquette will probably place 5,900 freight units this week."

Oil Earnings Continue Gains Into Quarter

New York, May 20.—The recovery in earning power of leading oil companies last year, a reflection largely of an improved price structure, plus increased sales, is exemplified in the reports of 25 companies compiled by the Wall Street Journal. In the aggregate, the net income of this group registered a net increase of 76 per cent compared with 1934, while in many instances profits were the best since 1930.

The turning point for the industry came in the second quarter of 1935 and has continued to present time. Prices on both crude and refined products are higher than a year ago, and the outlook, based on better demand, would indicate a continuance of satisfactory price levels.

First quarter results of companies to report thus far show material gains against the similar period of 1935, with per share income, as a whole, excluding Pacific Coast operators, recording increases of 200 per cent. In a few instances income this year compared with deficits last year.

For 25 leading oil companies in the United States, 1935 net, after all charges, including depreciation, depletion and estimated Federal taxes, amounted to $278,674,643, an increase of $120,064,033, equal to 76 per cent, compared with 1934. Of the 25 companies, four had income in 1935 against deficits in previous year. They are Barnsdall Corporation, Pure Oil Co., Shell Union Oil Co. and Standard Oil of Ohio.

Two companies showed reductions in income in 1935 against the previous year, namely, Atlantic Refining Co. whose results were affected by price competition in its territory on finished products, and Socony-Vacuum Oil Co., Inc. whose profits were affected by extraordinary capital expenditures for improvements and expansion, which were charged to earnings. Nineteen companies registered gains in net income against 1934.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively, A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Show Improvement in Slender Volume of Trading; Government Bonds Firm.

New York, May 20.—Stock trading was so dull that the moderately harder tone of prices made little impression. Gains were more numerous than losses toward the close, after a poor opening, with a turnover of less than three-quarters of a million shares. Government bonds hardened, but other sections were left in a rather oozy position. Grains were buoyan. September wheat closed ⅝ of a cent higher at 85½ cents a bushel.

Stocks started badly when most of the standard industrial issues opened with losses of fractions, but the decline did not frighten holders into unloading, and before the end of the first hour a mild rally had got under way. It lifted the market a half-point or so above the previous closing level, but in turn did not stimulate trading. Orders to sell stocks are still reported to be stowed a little above current prices, which acts as a brake on speculative activities. On the other hand, brokers for investment trusts and other investors report a steady demand for stocks at present prices. The stock market, in short, looks to be merely an investment affair for the outsider and an uninteresting give-and-take action for the floor trader, who with his advantages can profit from small fractional price changes.

In the early dealings the alcohol list continued heavy. United States Industrial Alcohol at one time was 1¾ points lower, but recovered part of the loss. The stock has been the subject of dividend gossip recently. Gypsum was another weak spot, sagging 2 points. Oils found the selling pressure that came to them yesterday still to be in the market and their prices receded. Amerada lurched heavily. Standard of California sold at a new low price, but its loss was slight.

Mesta Machine stiffened nearly a point on the favorable dividend. American Telephone made virtually no response to the voting of another regular dividend as that action had been expected. The tone was slightly firmer, but sedom has the stock been less active on a dividend date. Motor stocks as a group did well from the start. General Motors opened an eighth higher, sold at its previous closing price and then advanced a good fraction.

More Interest in Rails.

Afternoon trading brought little change in stock prices from the quotations prevalinig around noon. Motor shares edged forward a trifle but the steels were stationary. Rails turned a shade more active and prices grew firmer. Freight car loadings last week, as indicated by reports of leading carriers, climbed 19 per cent over the same period last year and rose 3 per cent above the volume of the preceding week. The pickup in loadings, the coal case decision and the reported improvement in Western crops doubtless brought more interest from investors.

Farm implement and mail order shares responded quickly to the spurt in wheat prices, but while Harvester rose more than a point Case was rather dead, possibly because so many issues that have done well marketwise now seem to be under the suspicion of the regulatory authorities. No sale, for example, had taken place in Owens Glass up to a late hour. Johns Manville could not come within a point of its previous closing level.

Francs Heavy.

French francs continued heavy near the price at which the Bank of France will lose more gold, and the action of the market kept to the fore the question of devaluation. Just why American speculative markets should worry so much about what the French may do with their currency is not altogether clear, and especially at a time when such worries are bringing funds to this country instead of encouraging liquidation.

If devaluation should hasten world-wide currency stabilization, the resultant impetus to business recovery would be worth far more to the stock market than might be the first cost of repatriation of foreign capital now held here. Our stock market sometimes acts as though people who ought to know better really believed an unsound currency system, an unbalanced budget, and managed economy generally were better for business earnings, upon which stock prices must finally come to rest than are time tried and common sense conditions.

France gives little indication of doing anything willfully that might bring on another bad case of inflation. Whatever course is to be followed with the currency will be chosen with the hope of strengthening the country's business and fiscal position, and in the long run that will greatly and in world-wile trade recovery.

Joyriding.

Gossip was renewed in Government bond circles that the Treasury shortly would announce measures to check joyriding on new issues, with restrictions to be imposed in time to prevent fantastic oversubscriptions to the forthcoming June financing. Most of the Wall Street reports suggest that the way chosen to deal with the problem will be to require subscribers to make a substantial down payment up to 10 per cent. At present no down payment is asked of incorporated banks and dealers of recognized standing, but from all individuals and firms a down payment of 5 per cent is required. Comparatively little padding of subscription is said to be done through banks and dealers, so it may be decided to make the terms more strict for individuals and firms only. Presumably the Federal Reserve Bank will continue to scan closely all subscriptions, investigating and scaling down those which appear to be improperly swollen.

No Habla.

The Agricultural Mortgage Bank of Colombia was not one of the foreign registrants which retreated without a struggle when confronted by English language difficulties in the registration statements. The bank made a show of resistance in answering the firsts even questions' the seventh, calling for a statement of control of the registrant, brought the reply: "The registrant is watched over the Superintendencia Bancaria." This slight defeat started a complete rout. When last seen, the applicant was shouting over his shoulder: "En anexo por separado se envia el balance consolidado del banco al cierro de operacions en 31 de Diciembre de 1935." But don't let us bother about a foreign language test. The American investor will have just as much protection from that bit of Spanish as he would get from good English. He won't read the statement anyway. Just as good defaults can be made in old country English, New Deal American and in Wall Street jargon as ever can be accomplished in Spanish.

Hoarding.

News that the Bank of England had requested London bullion dealers to restrict their dealings in gold coins was looked upon as merely an official attempt on the part of the British to check public hoarding of gold pieces bought at fancy premiums and to relieve European countries of the embarrassment of losing to the London bullion dealers gold coin hoarded by citizens of those countries. There has been quite a traffic in gold coin of all varieties, even American gold eagles, London serving as a hub of the trade. In continental countries remaining on the gold standard it is possible to get gold bars at a cost of some $14,000, which places gold hoarding within reach only of the wealthy. For several years in Paris gold bars have been cut into small pieces and sold to small hoarders at fancy premiums.

Chrysler Corp. Makes Another Wage Increase

Latest Advance Will Add $6,000,000 a Year to Pay Rolls.

Detroit, May 20 (AP).—The Chrysler Corporation announces that a wage increase for shop employes, aggregating between $5,000,000 and $6,000,000 annually, will become effective June 1.

President K. T. Keller said that the increase, the third general increase in hourly wages since August, 1933, would average about 5 per cent after adjustments are made. The company also distributed $2,300,000 to employes last February 14.

Keller said the Chrysler Corporation paid out $92,000,000 in wages and salaries last year, and that the pay roll to date this year is running ahead of 1935.

He recalled that all hourly rated employes received increases aggregating 20 per cent in August, 1933, and another increase of 10 per cent in March, 1934, which, he said, brought hourly rates to a level slightly higher than those prevailing prior to the depression.

In September, 1935, minimum rates for male employes were increased to 60 cents an hour and minimum rates for female employes were advanced to 52 cents an hour. Both rates excepted learners and apprentices.

Court Absolves 2 Detroit Bankers

Detroit, May 20 (AP).—Judge Patrick T. Stone dismissed charges of submitting false reports to the Federal Reserve Board against two executives of the former Guardian Detroit Union Group, Inc., at the conclusion of the Government's case in Federal Court today.

Judge Stone held that the evidence was insufficient to link Robert O. Lord and James L. Walsh with the alleged elimination of bills payable from the 1931 year-end report of the Guardian Detroit's unit bank in Flint, Mich. The court denied a motion to dismiss charges against a third defendant, Herbert R. Wilkin, who was vice president of the Flint bank.

Anthracite Advances Will Begin June 1

New York, May 20 (AP).—An increase in mine prices of anthracite coal is scheduled for June 1, to be followed by further increases on the first of each month up to and including October 1, it was learned at the Anthracite Institute today. Heretofore price changes will range from 10 cents to 15 cents higher per ton and the July, August, September and October increases will vary between 10 cents and 20 cents.

Daily Oil Output Up 43,068 Barrels

Tulsa, Okla., May 20 (AP).—Gross daily crude oil production in the United States totaled 3,005,440 barrels during the week ended May 16, the Oil and Gas Journal reported today.

The figures represented an increase of 43,068 barrels over the previous week, when the daily average production was 2,962,372 barrels. Oklahoma again led in the increase, showing a total of 560,525 barrels daily, an increase of 26,700 barrels over the previous week.

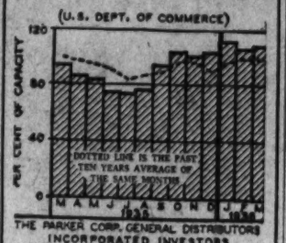
Cotton Spindles Less But Activity Greater



Boston, May 20.—Cotton spindle activity in March topped a year ago by 16½ per cent, while the average of the first quarter exceeded the same 1935 months by 10 per cent. The real picture, however, is not quite as rosy as this. The closing of some cotton mills resulted in the reduction of active spindles during the last year, which is partly responsible for the higher operating rate of the spindles in use.

Metals, Utilities Advance on Curb

New York, May 20 (AP).—Firming tendencies in the late dealings enabled curb market stocks to finish minor fractions to more than a point higher today. Trading was quiet throughout most of the session until increased buying orders in the low-priced utilities and metals found a thin sellers' market in the final hour and caused a modest pickup in dealings in other groups.

Issues active on the upside included Electric Bond & Share at 18⅞, Niagara Hudson Power at 8¼, United Light & Power preferred at 12½, Commonwealth Edison at 97½, Cities Service at 4⅜, Hecla Mining at 14¼, Gulf Oil at 79 and Humble Oil at 58¼. Squeeze Fears Jump Wheat 3¼c a Bushel 15,000,000 Bushels of May Contracts Are Due Within 5 Days.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 20.—Wheat shot suddenly skyward 3¼ cents a bushel today, responsive to fears of a squeeze in prices and to reports of active buying for mills.

The fears of a price squeeze related to month-end adjustment of Chicago May wheat contracts, in which about 15,000,000 bushels remain to be settled in the next five days, with supplies here relatively inadequate. Special anxiety as the crop outlook was aroused by advices of widespread dust-storms affecting six States and extending from Idaho to Kansas.

Wheat closed nervous at some reaction from the day's top but ⅞ to 2⅞ cents above yesterday's finish; May, 95@95¼; July, 86¼@86¼; September, 85½@85⅝. Crn unchanged to ¼ higher; May, 63½@63⅝; July, 60½@60⅝; September, 58½. Oats unchanged to ¼ off; July, 25⅜, and ryeat ⅛ decline to ⅛ advance; July, 54¾. In provisions, the result varied from 12 cents setback to a rise of 5 cents.

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Morgan Baker.

Employes in certain divisions of Treasury Department are rushing to get in a few days' leave before the unofficial no-leave period begins June 20, lasting until September 1. Approximately 3,000 workers are affected, due principally to a heavy docket of business occasioned by the veterans' bonus.

BAKER.

Divisions and the number of employes coming under the "unwritten law" of "please don't take your leave during the rush of work between June 20 and September 1" are approximately as follows:

Accounting Division, 500; Security Division, 200; Public Debt, 1,100 permanent and 900 temporary; Disbursing Office, 32 permanent and 150 temporary, and Loans and Currency, 500.

Officials emphasized that the request to defer leave was aimed at the full absence of 26 working days allowed. No official objection is said to be raised against employes taking two or three days during the summer.

Steward Demands Action.

Demanding immediate action on the Logan bill designed to extend and strengthen the civil service, Luther C. Steward, president of the National Federation of Federal Employes, yesterday sent each Senator a letter.

Pointing out that the Logan bill has been approved by the Senate Civil Service Committee, and that it has been on the Senate calendar since May 21, 1935—one full year today—Steward declared the measure "is needed desperately to halt the undermining of the merit system."

"We can assure you," the employe leader wrote, "that the situation faced by the civil service today is critical."

55 Years of Service.

George M. Copenhaver, assistant chief, Financial Division, who has just retired from Patent Office, has one of the longest records of service reported this year—55 years in the bureau.

Entering the service in 1881, Copenhaver was first connected with the Assignment Division and later was assigned to the Examining Division. In 1887 he was transferred to the Financial Division, in which office he continued until his retirement. Upon leaving the service he was presented with numerous gifts, including a traveling bag, toilet kit and easy chair, by his fellow workers.

Heads Alaskan Expedition.

Collins and party plan to arrive at their destination in June and to make their headquarters at Cape Prince of Wales, whence they will make their excavations in an attempt to find the remains of the earliest human beings in North America. He recently won a medal and award from the Swedish Academy of Science for his investigations in this field.

Henry D. Edgerton (P), Employment Service, Labor, former president of the Labor Athletic Association, is reported to have recovered from an illness in a hospital at his home in Wilson, N. C., and has returned to duty. Edgerton has been active in organizing numerous employe projects in the department.

Departmental Ditty.

Miss Huff, Miss Gruff and Mistress Bluff,
Are clerks of varied parts—
You have them working 'round you all;
They're adept in their arts!
Now, Huff sometimes is prone to bluff,
When work she ought to do;
And Bluff assumes a huffy air
Trying to impress you.
But Huff and Gruff and false-face Bluff
Are sometimes rolled in one;
Men, too, portray this counterpart;
Aren't Guv'ment climbers fun?
S. M. B. (F),

Lehman to Quit Public Career At End of Term

Decision Is Held Blow to Roosevelt; Leaders of Party Stunned.

seek re-election for a third term.

Immediately there were indications of a powerful "draft movement" on the part of Democratic leaders who had counted on the Governor's candidacy to strengthen the President's campaign in his home State.

Lieut. Gov. M. William Bray, of Utica, remarked that "New York State can ill afford at this time to lose Gov. Lehman's splendid services, and I sincerely hope he will find it possible to reconsider his decision."

The Governor's announcement, handed to newspapermen in the form of a 250-word mimeographed statement without a hint of what it contained, left political observers gasping, inasmuch as it had been generally conceded that he would again consent to head the Democratic State ticket.

"I feel the time has come when I may ask release from the cares and responsibilities of the Governorship," he asserted.

Lehman declined to discuss his announcement with newspapermen.

"Did your brother's death (Arthur Lehman, of the Lehman Corporation, who died last week) hasten your decision?" the Governor was asked.

"I prefer not to comment," the Governor replied.

Republican State Chairman Melvin C. Eaton said he was "not surprised."

The decision came as "very much of a surprise," however, to State Senator George R. Fearon, of Syracuse, frequently mentioned as Republican Gubernatorial candidate this fall.

Lehman, who entered State service in 1928 as lieutenant govevnor under the then Gov. Roosevelt, is one of the strongest vote-getters New York State Democracy has ever had. He was re-elected for a second term in 1934 by a plurality of 800,000 votes, a record for the State.

The Governnor has sought to put New York State in line with New Deal legislation.

After obtaining approval of unemployment insurance and NRA legislation for the State, Lehman recommended this year a social security plan to enable the State to take advantage of Federal contributions to aid the needy aged, the blind and dependent children.

The Democratic-controlled Senate approved the program, but the Republican-dominated Assembly thrice rejected it, despite two radio appeals by the Governor and a dramatic plea from the Assembly rostrum.

R. W. Morrison Leaves Federal Reserve Board

Friction With Eccles Is Denied; Loan to Party Reported Involved.

Federal Reserve Board officials denied last night that the resignation yesterday of Ralph W. Morrison, millionaire Texas cattleman and banker, from the board of governors, had been occasioned by differences with Chairman Marriner S. Eccles.

Although refusing to be quoted, members interviewed stressed the cordiality of the relations of the Texan and the board chief.

In the meantime, President Roosevelt refused to act on the resignation until he had conferred with Morrison.

Insiders held that the keynote of the difficulty culminating in the resignation lay originally in Morrison's loan of $25,000 to the Democratic National Committee.

This loan was shown on the committee's books in January. At the end of January Morrison was appointed to the Reserve Board. In March the loan was noted as "canceled." Some sources held that the loan had been canceled before Morrison's appointment.

Disturbed by the reaction that followed publication of this trinity of facts, Morrison is said to have expressed considerable dismay to friends at the imputation that he had canceled the loan in payment for his appointment to a responsible Federal position.

Morrison, a businessman and formerly a public utility operator of wide interests, heartily approved at the London economic conference, to which he was a delegate, the depreciation of the dollar's value, and favored the adoption of a bimetallic standard in this country.

Morrison's selection at the time was hailed as evidence that the President was "turning to the right" in his choice of men to mold the Nation's financial policies. Senator Carter Glass (Democrat), Virginia, characterized the group as "a pretty safe board."

Early reports yesterday had held that Eccles and Morrison had disagreed on policy matters. Officials stated this was entirely untrue.

Wind Tunnel

released to the aircraft industry for the first time.

Air gusts are being shown.

Two popular notions—that air bumps are rockier over the ocean than over the land and that the stability of a plane can be judged by a pilot giving it the gun and looping through the air several times—were debunked by two N. A. C. A. studies. The reactions of pilots attempting to test the longitudinal stability of airplanes in virtually every case was found to be contrary to the showings of instruments, while records of 20,000 hours of flying both across the country and over the Pacific showed that ocean flying was only one-fifth to one-eighth as bumpy as land flying.

Among the other glimpses of aviation's future shown at the conference were:

A fin arrangement for counteracting the drag and danger of the failure of one engine in a two-engine transport on takeoff.

The superior spinning and landing characteristics of the new pushertype, double-tail airplane with three-wheel landing gear, similar to the Hammond airplane, recently developed by the Department of Commerce, to other planes of the same size.

Shortens Takeoff.

A hydrofoil attached to the bottom of a seaplane hull that serves virtually as a "pedestal" in lifting the plane out of the water sooner, reducing resistance by as much as 25 per cent and shortening the takeoff distance.

Better cooling of the engine and lower drag through a new "nose slot" cowling hood.

A high speed Diesel aircraft engine operating at 2,000 revolutions per minute and producing a power output of .51 per cubic inch of displacement, only slightly under the power output of the most modern of carbureter engines. The significance of this comparative result is that it indicates a Diesel engine as light as a gasoline engine is possible. Up to now almost the sole objection to Diesel engines in aircraft has been their excessive weight for the horsepower generated.

A glass cylinder engine that makes possible the observation of the air movement during the injection and compression of the fuel and the air mixture.

Controls Mixture.

A fuel flow meter that tells exactly what mixture of fuel the airplane is using, permitting pilots to thin out the mixture and save fuel consumption.

A year and a half in the building, the new high-speed tunnel is of reinforced concrete construction throughout, with its passage completely lined with steel plates to prevent concrete dust and particles from falling into the air stream and being blown into the models. The pressure on the outside of the tunnel is a million and a half pounds and persons entering the test chamber must pass through pressure-controlled air locks.

Eighty-five miles is the maximum wind speed of the tunnel, with the maximum velocity approaching the speed at which sound travels. For today's demonstration showing the drag effects of small rivet heads exposed on the surface of a wing, the tunnel was run at half speed, the barometric pressure in the dome-shaped test chamber thinning out to a level corresponding to an altitude of 2,400 feet. When running at high speeds, the pressure corresponds to an altitude of more than 12,000 feet.

By generating such record wind speeds, the testing of models at speeds gretaer than either the present world's speed record or the critical maximum speeds of most airplanes is possible.

16-Blade Propeller.

The tunnel's 8,000-horsepower motor is housed in a separate building outside the tunnel and is connected to a shaft driving a 16-blade propeller. With the whole 8,000 horsepower concentrated in a working section only 8 feet in diameter, keeping the tunnel cool has required the installation of an intricate cooling system.

Culbertson on Bridge

Unavoidable Finesse.

Most experts abhor finesses and often go to extremes in trying to avoid them, preferring to maneuver for various end positions, such as squeezes and throw-in plays.

This aversion can be soundly capitalized by defenders through the use of a little imagination and nerve. Far better to put the declarer to a guess before his plan of play has become crystalized than to wait until he has had the opportunity to take into account the position of certain honors, with their implication as to lay of other more vital honors. Today's hand is an example of carrying the attack to the declarer.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 Sp.	Pass	2 Cl.	2 Di.
2 Ht.	3 Di.	Pass	Pass
4 Cl.	Pass	4 Sp. [final bid]

East's bidding was agrressive, as may be seen. His first two bids amply expressed his hand. His bid of four clubs was unwarranted. West had a close question to decide over South's three diamond bid. Three spades was tempting, but his pass was sounder, his partner not having rebid the spade suit.

South opened the ace of diamonds and, after a look at the dummy, promptly shifted to the eight of clubs. He had only to remember declarer's raise in that suit to realize that declarer had at least three clubs, which would leave North with a singleton. Declarer, fearing that North held the club king and that eight was a singleton, went up with dummy's ace to prevent a ruff. He figured that if the trump finesse against the king lost it would lose to South and, in that event, South would be unable to put his partner on lead for the feared club ruff.

His plan went much astray, however, when South won the king of trumps, laid down the club king, and proceeded to give North a club ruff for the setting trick!

The flaw in declarer's reasoning was this: If, as he feared, North had held the club king doubly guarded and South the trump king, the contract could not have been made. South hardly would win his trump king at the first opportunity. He would wait until dummy was reduced in trump. Suppose declarer, after winning the ace of clubs on the first lead of the suit, had returned to his hand with a high heart, ruffed his rematining diamond, and then taken the spade finesse. South would hold off and win the second trump lead, then would force declarer to trump a diamond. Declarer's last trump would be used up in drawing the adverse trumps, and the club suit still would not be established, and would be without entry, as well. Nor would it have availed declarer to win the ace of clubs and lead trumps without worrying over his losing diamond. Again, South would wait for the second round of the suit before taking his king, and then he would return a trump, knocking out dummy's last one. When North should get in with the club king he then could cash a diamond for the setting trick.

Far-sighted analysis would have shown declarer that the club finesse was unavoidable ,and by taking it he would have made his contract with ease.

Jury Indicts 4 On Counterfeit Money Charge

U.S. Agents Claim Spurious $10 Bills Were Passed by Defendants.

With the indictment of four men on charges of possession and passing counterfeit money, the grand jury yesterday struck what was termed a "death blow" at the bogus money racket in Washington. The quartet is alleged to have operated here for many months, passing numerous spurious $10 bills.

Those named in the indictments were Robert Tyler, George Walton Rumsey, Cuccahiara John Battista, who bears the alias of "John the Baptist," and Wililam Turner.

Secret Service operatives claimed the four had disposed of a large number of bogus bills in the city, most of them in $10 denominations. Turner was seized after he had given a $10 bill in purchase of a bottle of whisky. Arrest of the others followed.

In another indictment yesterday the grand jury charged Ourn L. Swann, 24, whose automobile allegedly inflicted fatal injuries on Elmer F. Robinson, 28, of 3624 Eleventh street northwest, who was riding in the rear seat of Swann's automobile, with manslaughter. Garfield Selby, Negro, was indicted for first degree murder in connection with the shooting of George Scott.

In all the grand jury returned 40 indictments and three "ignoramuses."

Those indicted were Thomas J. Broderick, Fred Weems, Charles A. Grace, Wilbur A. Snipley, James Krahling and Newton Washington, joyriding; Bernard Rhine, Paul J. Vasquez, Frederick L. Mack and James Harvey, grand larceny; Jack Craven, William H. Francis, violation of section 851-b, D. C. code; Edward M. Donaldson, housebreaking nad larceny.

James H. Butler, Naurice Travis, Louis Garner, John D. Butler, Georgianna Hamilton, Gladys Green, Richard Breen, Charles Groves and Randolph King, robbery; James McKay, Moses Douglas and George R. Graham, assault with a dangerous weapon; Nathaniel H. Fields, Howard Parsons, Kalil S. Warbey, forgery and uttering; Robert Tyler, George Walton Rumsey, Cuccoahiara John Battista and William Turner, violation of section 965, title 18, U. S. code; Edith Lindsey, Charles Edgar Craig, Roderick H. Purks, Evelyn O. Krinkley and James Shelton, jr.

Those against whom the grand jury ignored charges were: Leroy Murray, assault with a dangerous weapon; Helen Gerald, robbery; James O. Brown, violation of the liquor taxing act of 1934; Robert Ballard, manslaughter.

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Beall at the murder trial of Anne Lyddane, former Rockville (Md.) bank secretary. Witnesses yesterday told of a cemetery tryst between Beall and the defendant.

Witness Tells of Lyddane Tryst

were telling me she had been with my husband the day before or the night before."

"Did you ever see the defendant in Darnestown?"

"Yes."

"Describe the circumstances and what she was doing."

"I saw her leaving our garage many times. My last baby was born the day after I found Mrs. Lyddane in the garage with my husband."

Mrs. Beall said that Mrs. Lyddane began calling her on the telephone and taunting her in April, 1932, and continued calling her until she filed suit for divorce in December, 1933.

"Why was the divorce suit withdrawn?"

"For a number of reasons. Arthur begged me to withdraw it. He said things would be better for me and the children. He said he did not want a divorce."

Attorney Prescott, in cross-examining Mrs. Beall, sought to emphasize the point that most of the telephone calls were "anonymous."

Prosecution Rests.

Mrs. Beall said there was no doubt in her mind that it was Anne Lyddane's voice.

"That voice," she said, "told me things that couldn't have been learned from anybody except Arthur."

Beall admitted while he was on the stand that he saw Mrs. Lyddane two or three times a week after the divorce suit was withdrawn.

The prosecution rested its case today after Varah had told his story about the cemetery tryst, and the defense began calling a long list of character witnesses.

Andrew J. (Cy) Cummings, president of the Maryland State Fair, Inc., which operates the Laurel race track, said that Mrs. Lyddane's reputation for peace and order was "very good."

Frank H. Karn, president of the Montgomery Board of County Commissioners, said the same thing.

"Had you heard of her escapades with Arthur Beall?" he was asked by John Oxley, assistant prosecutor.

"I heard some discussion, yes."

"Do you consider a married woman who runs around with a married man who is not her husband a woman of good order?"

"Not if that was true?"

Judge Testifies.

Albert M. Bouic, a Rockville attorney, said he had heard of Mrs. Lyddane's "intimacies" with Beall.

Asked if he would still say that she had a good reputation, Bouic replied: "My answer would be that except for that her reputation was very good."

The prosecution asked all the other character witnesses the same questions, and the result was more talk about Anne Lyddane's "intimacies" with Beall than about her good character.

Thomas M. Anderson, judge of the Juvenile Court in Rockville, testified that he couldn't say that a woman was of "good order" who went around with another man, the father of three children.

Mrs. Irene Christopher was one of the few character witnesses who had not heard about Mrs. Lyddane's affair with Beall.

Dr. Cyrus E. Hawks said Mrs. Lyddane had a good reputation. Asked if he knew about her "intimacies" with Beall, he replied with a question:

"What do you mean by intimacies?"

"Well, to be plain," said Oxley, "a married woman who is intimate with a married man not her husband."

Dr. Hawks hesitated a moment and then, in a low voice, said: "I would say it would be generally considered bad."

Other character witnesses were Charles M. Jones, secretary-treasurer of the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission; Edward H. Cashell, Rockville automobile dealer; Ira C. Whittaker, clerk of the board of county commissioners; Leonard Nicholson and Mrs. Mary W. O'Brien.

J. Harry Gormley and John G. Stone testified that Mrs. Lyddane and "Slom," her husband, attended a party at Stone's home the night of March 30, 1935.

Gormley said there was "nothing unusual" in Mrs. Lyddane's demeanor that night. The defense brought this out because, according to the prosecution, it was at this time Mrs. Lyddane was demanding action from the gangsters hired to murder her husband. The party was on a Saturday night and Mrs. Lyddane was arrested the following Monday.

The trial was recessed early this afternoon because Preston Lane, a member of the defense counsel, had to go to Annapolis. "Slom" Lyddane, and many others connected with the trial, went to the Hagerstown races, where "Slom" did some sprinting himself to elude photographers. Beall also was at the track.

Pending Doom Of Sea Horses Stirs Chicago

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 20.—The "herd" of baby sea horses doomed to starve to death in the John G. Shedd Aquarium started a stampede of protest telephone calls today.

While the remnant of the original 125 babies grew weaker from continued lack of food, complaints came in so fast that W. H. Chute, aquarium director, said "I wish everyone would forget all about it."

Revising his previous statement that it would be impossible to feed the baby fish because they lived on microscopic water life, Chute said it would be possible "as a laboratory experiment" but would not be practical.

A suggestion from Washington that the babies be fed artemia was not new, the director asserted, because "artemia was developed first by us right here in Chicago."

The 125 baby sea horses were born while their parents were on their way from home in Bahama Island waters to Chicago. They were fed nothing since birth because the aquarium did not have food small enough for the digestive systems of their quarter-inch long bodies. By Sunday night, more than half of them were dead.

President Will Visit His Injured Mother

President Roosevelt's mother, Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt, makes light of her misforutnes, but the President last night was planning to spend the week-end in Hyde Park after he learned she was in bed with a cracked hip bone.

Mr. Roosevelt, in a telephone conversation with his 82-year-old mother, asked her how she was feeling. She replied that she was "slightly handcapped."

It developed that Mrs. Roosevelt had fallen over a doorstep while visiting her grandchildren in New York May 13. Only on the President's urging did she call a doctor.

Physicians did not consider the injury to be serious, but told Mrs. Roosevelt she would have to remain in bed for two weeks. The President plans to leave Washington to visit her at Hyde Park tomorrow. He will return here Tuesday.

Hindenburg Leaves Again for Germany

Lakehurst, N. J., May 20 (U.P.).—The Zeppelin Hindenburg headed back across the Atlantic tonight, less than 16 hours after her arrival today on a regular commercial voyage. The big German airship carried a full load of passengers—51 men and women—and an express cargo that included a dismantled airplane.

The ground crew of United States sailors loosed handling lines at 11:05 p. m. and the long silver craft, her cabin windows blazing with lights, slipped quickly northward toward New York City for a display flight before charting a course for Frankfort-on-Main, Germany.

The Zeppelin had planned to leave at 10 p. m., but a delay was caused by late-arriving passengers.

Two Washington residents, Dr. J. Ward Mankin and W. R. Frank Himes, are booked as passengers aboard the Hindenberg. The men, traveling together, plan to tour the continent before returning July 1 on the British liner Queen Mary.

BIG NEWS !!!
Gordon's Gin
Famous for its LIQUEUR Quality★
In District of Columbia
4/5 QUART
FORMERLY $1.75

Big news indeed! For Gordon's is the world's finest gin—the world's largest selling gin. For 167 years—Gordon's has been the base around which many of the world's famous gin drinks have been created. The reason is—Gordon's has that important liqueur quality and higher proof—94.4. This means greater strength, sustained flavor.

100% NEUTRAL SPIRITS DISTILLED FROM GRAIN

LIQUEUR QUALITY★

Gordon's Gin is not, of course, a liqueur—it is not sweet—it is very dry. Gordon's attains liqueur quality through an exclusive formula—167 years old. Gordon's juniper berries are imported. Then aged over a period of years until ready to release their full, ripe, luscious flavor. Gordon's Gin is the heart of the distillate. It is crystal clear. Made with 100% neutral spirits distilled from grain. Its quality is tested every fifteen minutes. Thus with Gordon's Gin you get RICHER FLAVOR—VELVETY SMOOTHNESS—LIQUEUR QUALITY.

HIGHER PROOF—94.4

GREATER STRENGTH. Gordon's has found the higher proof, 94.4, to be the precise strength for perfect gin drinks. Gordon's pays a higher tax for this greater strength, but it means cocktails, rickeys, Tom Collins and other gin drinks that are always full-flavored! DRINKS NEVER TASTE THIN WITH GORDON'S GIN.
